Sociology and Economics. I have followed your course and writings with interest and sympathy. Now as a Presbyterian Minister, whose chief desire is to see Christian principles applied in our national life, especially in commercial and industrial relationships, I can hardly say how pleased I am to see you made the leader of liberalism. I predict a course for you in Canada something like that of Lloyd George in the old land. You stand both of you for principles that are of universal and human interest. You are entrusted with the sacred responsibilities of government at a more critical and momentous time than any that your illustrious predecessor has had to deal with. You have his memory, cooperative youth, and suitable training for the very reasons that are so urgent now. Hundreds of thousands will be looking to you as their champion and friend. May the reins of power may soon be given to you, and that you may have many years of highest success in the sincere wish of every true Liberal.

Very sincerely yours,
W. P. Grant.
