

CURIOUS EXPERIMENT.—In the report of the experiments of the New-York Farmer's Club on the 18th inst., the following account of experiments, by whom made does not appear, of the effects of ether upon that class of plants known as sensitive plants:

The mimosa pudica being placed under a glass vase with cotton wet with the ether, in twenty minutes the plant lost all its sensibility, and could not be made to move by touching it with a pin. At its most susceptible parts some change in its color was perceptible. The plant was ten minutes insensible, and then gradually recovered. This experiment was tried on the oralis sensitive, which is less irritable than the first named, and did not lose its susceptibility in less than twenty-five minutes, and recovered slowly.

The plant dionœa muscipula, after twenty minutes began to close up its young leaves gradually, and then lost all its sensibility.

Those who give proper attention to sleep, air, diet, exercise, wearing apparel, etc., will seldom want a Physician; and those who do not, will seldom enjoy health, though they employ as many as they please.—Buchan.
