A Kingston veterinary surgeon reports many sick cattle. He cannot diagnose the disease, which takes the form of weakness, affecting both old and young cattle. The animals fall down and are unable to rise, and the mortality in such cases is exceedingly high.

The season for route bills is on and horsemen will find it to their advantage to patronize the Reporter office for bills. We have the largest and best selected stock of stallion cuts of any office in the country, and can get out route bills the same day the order is received.

Jas. F. Gordon, woolen manufacturer, Athens, has just imported a lot of new machinery from Boston, Mass., and is busily engaged in getting his mill in order for an early start. We may have something more to say about the improvements he is making in a later issue.

Henry Ward Beecher used to receive letters from his congregation on Sunday; they were laid on the pulpit cushion. On opening one such letter he found one word only was written therein; this word was "Fool." Addressing the congregation, he said: "I have known many instances of people writing letters and forgetting to sign their names; but this is the first instance of a man signing his name and forgetting to write the letter."

The season for large hen fruit has arrived and Uncle Isaac Robeson was the first to bring in the "big egg" to the Reporter office. The egg, which he says was laid by a last season's chicken (a cross between the Black Poland and White Leghorn), measured 8 inches by 6½ inches in circumference. Uncle Isaac did not follow the time-honored custom of allowing ye editor to see whether it contained two yolks or not, but carefully rolled the prize up in about half a newspaper and consigned it to a capacious coat pocket. Probably on Easter Sunday he will elucidate the problem as to whether or not it will take more than half a dozen such eggs to make a square meal.

Although the gate receipts last year were comparatively large, our expenses were similarly so, but we are pleased to state that we find a balance of about 25c in the hands of the Treasurer with which to commence our spring spoils and to equip our team.

Trusting that we have the sympathy of our townspeople and hoping we will receive in the future some more tangible evidence of such sympathy, we remain &c.

UP THE GATINEAU.

The Scribe of the Reporter Tells of an Exciting Trip in Carrying Out a Deer Shot on the Mountains Near Lake Penechongo, Quebec, in the Fall of 1893.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—In response to numerous requests from readers of the Reporter who have read the deer-hunting episodes that have appeared in the Reporter for several years, we have decided to re-hash some of the hunting stories as told by the Scribe of the Reporter, or related to him by old hunters with whom he came in contact on these hunting expeditions. The one selected for this week was printed in the Reporter several years ago, but as hundreds of our readers will read it for the first time now, we think it will prove interesting enough to be read by all who take any interest in deer-hunting yarns. By way of introduction, we may say that the events detailed below occurred in the fall of 1893, when another length of rope and so on down to the solid ground. About half way down from the top the rope had to be thrown around a huge boulder, and when the last man was nearly down the rope slipped down into a crevice so tight that Corney had to go up some 15 feet and adjust the rope so that it could be pulled down after him. To stand at the bottom of the mass of rocks and look to the top was enough to appall the stoutest heart. In many places rocks weighing tons were seen to be almost loosened from their hold, and a sudden jar or mistep might easily start them from their positions and dash the descending hunters to their death. However, the bottom was reached without mishap and a couple of poles were cut to which the

the Reporter Hunt Club went up the Gatineau to a point some 150 miles north of Ottawa on a hunting and fishing expedition, having Corney Teeple as guide and interpreter, and the location was on Lake Penechongo, a lake emptying into the Gatineau river. The party had been very successful, and the day before the events detailed Corney had shot a very large buck, and after disemboweling it had to leave it to be carried off later. The next morning the party all took to the hills and, after an exciting race, captured three fine, large deer, which were carried down to the boats. Corney, the Scribe, and Machine Agent, decided to go back and bring out the deer shot by Corney. They had to go nearly two miles from shore to where the deer lay and found the hills very high and precipitous and when the deer was reached it was nearly sundown. The carcass lay on one of the highest peaks in the vicinity and within a couple of rods of an almost perpendicular descent of probably one hundred and fifty feet. Corney, who knew the lay of the land, decided to let the carcass down the side of the mountain by means of a rope, of which each man carried about 25 feet. Throwing one end around the trunk of a small sapling, he lowered himself down to a projecting ledge some 25 feet below. The rope was then drawn up and fastened to the deer's head and lowered to where he stood, the men following hand over hand down the rope. Again Corney swung himself off over the ledge and reached another ledge farther down. Then the game and men were let down deer was fastened and a start made through the labyrinth of underbrush bordering the dry bed of a mountain rivulet for about a mile. The Scribe was given the task of carrying the three rifles and the coats of the other men, and finding they were slippery things to handle he cut a couple of wythes and, making the coats and guns into a bundle, strapped them to his back. Darkness coming on he suggested the idea of making a torch of birch bark with which to light up the path down the bed of the creek. A halt was made and while one cut a stick with a number of prongs, the other peeled a quantity of birch bark from a tree near by and these strips were soon securely fastened to the end of the stick with small wythes and made an excellent torch. Picking up their burden, the men went on down the creek, in many places having to wade in water nearly to their knees. After trailing along for nearly an hour, with no signs of the lake, the men decided to stand the carcass of the deer up against a tree and try and find the place where the boat had been left and they started in what they thought would be the right direction to find it. After going nearly half a mile, they saw the light from the camp on the opposite shore and saw that they had been going in the wrong direction. They retraced their steps and found that they had struck the shore at first only a few rods from where the boat lay, but had gone in the wrong direction. They reached camp about ten o'clock that night and thoroughly enjoyed the hearty supper provided.

Manitobans were wearing straw hats last week. The weather throughout the west is summer-like. Seeding is general. The weather has caused prairie fires, but no great damage is reported.

HE WAS LISTED TO DIE.

Rheumatism Attacks Old and Young Alike—But it Never Baffles South American Rheumatic Cure.
Wm. H. Winslow, sr., 32A Turgeon street, St. Henri, Que., says of the great South American Rheumatic Cure: "My son was so bad with acute rheumatism that we thought he was going to die. We tried many remedies and physicians without success. Three bottles of your wonderful remedy has made a new man of him. The first few doses gave delightful relief from the pain." Sold by J. P. Lamb & Son.

PERFECTLY HELPLESS.

Probably the most remarkable case of rheumatism known to physicians in Kingston, Ont., was that of

Mr. Richard Savage, driver for G. M. Wilkinson & Son. During the past winter this young man was away from his work for no less a time than five weeks. If he attempted to do anything, he was obliged to return home at once, being unable to endure the pain. For two weeks he could not walk a step. "I tried all the cures everybody suggested," said Mr. Savage, "but they were of no use. Finally a friend sent me a bottle of Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. I drained the contents of the bottle and was so relieved that I sent for another. I was completely cured by the second bottle, and I have not had a rheumatic pain since. I never felt better in my life, and I heartily recommend Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure to all sufferers from rheumatism."

Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure is put up in 50 cent bottles, containing ten days' treatment. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine. The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.
