F. Peck, a miner, to devise a house in a class by itself.

He has constructed of empty beer bottles a house 16x20 feet in the clear, with cellings eight feet high, and containing two rooms. It was built in October of last year by Mr. Peck, entirely unaided, at such odd moments as he could spare from his regular duties at the mine.

Ten thousand empty beer bottles were incorporated in the structure. The inside walls are plastered with mortar, which is spread to a depth sufficient to cover the protruding bottle necks, thus making a smooth surface. Mr. Peck lived all last winter in his peculiar abode with his wife and two children, a girl of 7 and a boy of 3 years, and says, while the temperature in many residences of Tonopah reached the freezing point quite often, his family found their glass house exceedingly comfortable at all times.

country on the boundaries of his range he trots along without minding his steps. The dogs may have all the fun here with his train that they can. He intends only that they shall not find his home tree, nor even the vicinity of it. So, as he enters his own neighborhood swamp, his movements change. The dogs may be hard after him or not. If they are not close behind he knows by long graperience that they may be expected and never so far forgets his precious skin as to go straight to his next-tree.

Instead he trots along a boundary fence or in the stream, leaping the crossing logs and coming out, likely, on the bank opposite his home tree. Farther down he lumps the stream, runs hard towards a big gum and from a dozen feet away takes a flying leap, catching the rough trunk up just out of reach of the keen-nosed dogs, He goes on up a little and leaps again, touching the ground ten feet out, thus leaving a blank of twenty-sor more feet in his trail.

The stream or fence has puzzled the dogs, but now at the tree they begin to worry. They circle and finally pick up the scent beyond the first gap, only to run instantly into a greater blank, one that the widest circling does not cross. For the coon has taken to another tree, out on the limbs of this to still another, and on like a squirrel, from tree to tree to perhips a hundred yards, on, it may be, to his own trigh hollow.

HE USED BIG WORDS.

The General Manager Cured Him of it, However.

A few months ago the son of a railway director was, through his railway director was, through his father's influence, given a position of some importance on a large railway. He was fresh from Cambridge, and in the orders which he had from time to the orders which he had from that the time issued to the men under him, always made use of the longest, most unused words. This habit led to some expensive blunders, and, the matter coming before the general manager, he wrote the young official the following latter:

coming before the general manager, he wrote the young official the tollowing letter;

"In promu gating your esofetion cogitations and in articulating your superfit it sentim htalities and amicable philosophisal or psychological observations, beware or pratitudinasaine affections. Let your extemsational communication possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibleness, a coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomeration of flatulent garrulty, jejume bablement, and ashine affection. Let your extemporancous decantings and unpremeditated expatiation have intelligibility and veracious vivacity without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast.
