A ROMANTIC STORY.

trave Deed of Cecil Bhodes at Place of Peace-Work of Ancient Miners

One can easily appreciate the cirumstances which induced the dead Colossus to select for his resting place the solemn, peaceful grandeu of the Matoppo Hills. For it was there that the most tragic episodes of his life were enacted, and it was there also that in the dark days o the Matabele rebellion he saw mer willingly sacrifice them ves in the cause of Empire.

But of the many brave deeds performed by the men who took part in what has been described as "the race for the V.C." near the place whe he is buried, none surpassed the act of heroism by which Mr. Rhodes brought the war to an end. armed, he rode into the heart of the nemy's encampment, called a great Indaha, or conference of the chi spoke to them as a father might to his rebellious children, and did no leave until he had induced them to proclaim peace. The roc upon which Mr. Rhodes sat at this histor ic assembly is now a tranquil spet which he always loved, and is the place of his sepuichre-a tomb mo.

enduring than the Pyramids.
The Matoppo Hills stretch in north-easterly direction from Bulu-wayo for a distance of a hundred niles, their greatest breadth being forty-five miles. The place of burial is situated about thirty miles from the town. Near by is a part of the hills which bears the important title of "The World's View." The prospect from any chosen summit makes a deep impression on the spectator. It is impressive without being picturesque. As far as eye can see there is spread out before him a panorama of tree less mountains of varied shapes, mostly of abrupt outline, suggestive of a turbulent sea stilled by an om-nipotent hand. The base of the hills is fringed with trees, and here and there is a clump of thick bush. In places great gorges draw black lines between the mountains, which, moreover, are punctured with giant caves, where the Matabele took refuge during the rebellion, and could have held out for an indefinite period had not the genius and daring of Mr. Rhodes put an end to the out break. The predominant note is massiveness and stability, for the hills are of granite; but the hardness is toned down by the green of the lower foli-age and the soft, velvety azure of he sky above. It was the poet in Cecil Rhodes which impelled him to his choice. In places the traveler comes upon groups of ruins which in this out-ofthe world region strangely stir the imagination.

It is difficult to realize that these habitations were occupied by gold seekers so long ago as 1000 B C. When one thinks of Rhodesia it is invariably of the great possibilities which the future holds for the coun-But what of Rhodesia's past? Three thousand years ago men as gold-hungry as the "greenest" prospector of to-day scoured the Matoppos and the surrounding country for the precious metal. These crumbling ruins once contained the furraces for the retorting and smelting of the gold. In many quarters huge excatug far down into the bowels of the earth in search of the metal. eral of these mines are still the largest on the earth's surface. sert that Job was a Rodesian, basng his enquiries on the words in the Book of Job: "Surely there is a vein for the silver, and a place for the gold where they fine it." The historian attempts to identify the "place" as Zimbabye, where ancient ruins abound. The land now known as Rhodesia was, he asserts, in Job's days one of the few civilized countries in the world. For centuries afterward it was overrun by savages, and the man who is to rest in the land that bears his name did more than any other to reclaim it to civilization.

Buluwayo, where the coffin rested for some time, was until the year 1893 the royal kraal of King Lobengula. It is now a thriving town reminiscent at each step of the man to whom it owes existence.
