Matthews to Take His Time - No Snap Judgment, He Says, in Choosing From Varied Candi-

Chicago, Oct. 16.-Women affinity seekers made a sort of Mecca out o N. H. Matthews' flat, 1,305 North Halsted street, yesterday. Cupid awoke to the realization, if he didn't already know it, that "advertising pays."

After a strenuous day's work receiving callers and looking up a few candidates living in the immediate vicinity of his home, Mr. Matthews looked cheerful at night. He believed there was hope-at night. He believed there was nope-even for a man with four small children. In a modest sort of way "Ar. "Well, I don't believe I liked any of them, but, of course, if papa should select one, I am sure we would all be satisfied," Iva continued. "I did like the nice, fat woman who said she lived in Seminary avenue. She has two little to find the housekeeper we had last week gone."

It developed that the "candidate" who went on probation for four days, and suddenly departed, was Mrs. Mary Fisher, housekeeper for a family at 3,244 Wabash avenue, seventh flat.

"I read Mr. Matthew's advertisement in a newspaper," said Mrs. Fisher, who is an elderly, robust appearing woman. "It said four children, but to my surprise when I got there I found there were seven, four small ones, the grown daughter and two big boys. I felt sorry for Mabel, the oldest girl; she had more than her hands full. So I stayed four days, until a week ago last Saturday. days, until a week ago last Saturday, got things pretty well cleaned up, and left.

"I have been deluged with letters and matrimonial papers since this matter became public," he said: "I called this evening on several of the women who wrote to me. I assure you some of the women are surprisingly refined and well educated. Some showed me their bank books to prove they had means. I pay no attention to the matrimonial papers. I think they are all fakes."

An embarrassing situation confronted Mr. Matthews last night when he returned from making several calls. Four women, one accompanied by a pretty 14-year-old daughter, were awaiting his arrival in the parlor. While waiting for Mr. Matthews the women showed a pretence of good will towards one another and amused themselves playing with the children

Madame Kennedy's hats were made originally for Miss Helen Hale, who will use them in a little French song in a Broadway show. Since her invention has proven such a success, however, Madame Kennedy believes that the style will become, if not permanent, at least a decided fad.

KEEWATIN INDIANS STRANGLE AND BURN SICK FRIENDS.

Dreadful Story Told by Police Commis sioner Perry-Indians Did Not Pre-tend That the Victims Were Possessed of Evil Spirits-They Were Just Old and Useless.

Winnipeg, Oct. 15.-The arrival of Commissioner A. Bowen Perry, R. N. W. M. P., and his party in Winnipeg last night from Norway House disclosed a terrible story of wholesale strangling and burning in the region of Keewatin district, just above the northeast corner of the Province of Manitoba. The Commissioner held his court in the Council chamber of the H. B. Company's fort at Norway House on Monday, Oct. 7. Two Pesequan chiefs of the Sucker band of Saltreaux Indians were to have been tried, but Chief Jack strangled and cleverly throttled himself to death a few days before the arrival of the Commissioner at Norway House. His brother, Joseph Fiddler, was tried, and participation in several devilish murders was proved against him, particularly that of his kinswoman, Mrs. Thomas Fiddler, and a man named Menewascum, whom he helped to strangle twenty days after he strangled the little squaw. and burning in the region of Keewatin

Two brothers named Eyelids and Angus Rae gave most sensational evidence, and specifically described five strangulations and burnings in which they had participated. The bodies in two instances were quietly buried by these Raes, but in the other three they were thrown on a huge fire. In one instance the strangulation was not complete, and was not intended to be, for the victim was bound with leather thongs and placed on a platform over the IIre, and his bonds burst with the heat, and the poor fellow, all in flames, ran howling through the woods. He was despatched with shotguns by his triends.
