"The Man Who Disappeared."

CHAPTER XVI.
After The Disclosure.

THE person who spoke first was Edna Hill. She had seen Turl less often than the other two had, and Davenport never at all. Hence there was no great stupor in her remark to Turl: "But I don't understand. I know Mr. Larcher met a man coming through that hallway one night, but it turned out to be you."

"Yes, it was I," was the quite answer. "The name of the new man, you see, was Francis Turl."
As light flashed over Edna's face, Larcher found his tongue to express a certain doubt: "But how could that be? Davenport had a letter from you before he—before any transformation could have begun. I saw it the night before he disappeared—it was signed Francis Turl."

Turl smiled. "Yes, and he asked if you could infer the tongue to express a certain doubt. But how could that be? Davenport had a letter from you before he—before any transformation could have begun. I saw it the night before he disappeared—it was signed Francis Turl."

Salt Rheum On the Hand

Yielded only to the soothing, healing influence of DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.
In addition to the suffering and annoyance caused by eczema and salt rheum there is always danger of the trouble spreading and becoming chronic. For this reason the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment should be regular and persistent until the cure is thorough and complete.
Mrs. John J. Delory, Litwood, Antigonish county, N.S., writes: "I want to say that Dr. Chase's Ointment has proven a great blessing to me. I had salt rheum on one hand, and could not get it healed up. The itching was most distressing at times. Two boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment has cured me completely, and I gladly recommend it to every sufferer."
In every home there is a demand for Dr. Chase's Ointment. It is particularly useful where there are children. Chafing and skin irritation are relieved at once and eczema is cured by this soothing, healing ointment. 50 cents a box, at all dealers or Edman, Bates & Co., Toronto.

don't know what to think."
Turl sighed patiently. "You can understand now why I didn't want to tell. Perhaps you can appreciate what it was to me to revive the past—to interrupt the illusion, to throw it back. So much had been done to perfect it, my dearest thought was to preserve it. I shall preserve it, of course. I know you will keep the secret, all of you; and that you'll support the illusion."

"Of course," replied Larcher. Edna, for once glad to have somebody's lead to follow, perfunctorily followed it. But Florence said nothing. Her mind was yet in a whirl. She continued to gaze at Turl, a touch of bewildered aversion in her look.
"I had meant to leave New York," he went on, watching her with cautious anxiety, "in a very short time, and certainly not to seek any of the friends or haunts of the old cast-off self. But when I got into the street that night, after you and Mr. Bud had passed me, Larcher, I fell into a strong curiosity as to what you and he might have to say about Davenport. This was Mr. Bud's first visit to town since the disappearance, so I was pretty sure your talk would be mainly about that. Also, I wondered whether he would detect any trace of my long occupancy of his room. I found I'd forgot to bring out the cover taken from the bankbills. Suppose that were seen, and you recognized it, what then would you form? For the sake of my purpose I ought to have put curiosity aside, but it was too keen; I resolved to gratify it this one time only. The hallway was perfectly dark, and all I had to do was to wait there till you and Mr. Bud should come out. I knew he would accompany you down-stairs for a good-night drink in the saloon when you left. The slightest remark would give me some insight into your general views of the affair. I waited accordingly. You soon came down together. I stood well out of your way in the darkness as you passed. And you can imagine what a revelation it was to me when I heard your talk. Do you remember? Davenport—it couldn't be anybody else—had disappeared just too soon to learn that the young lady—so Mr. Bud called her—had been true, after all! And it broke your heart to have nothing to report when you saw her!"

"I do remember," said Larcher. Florence's lip quivered.
"I stood there in the darkness, like a man stunned, for several minutes," Turl proceeded. "There was so much to make out. Perhaps there had been something going on, about the time of the disappearance, that I—that Davenport hadn't known. Or the disappearance itself may have brought out things that had been hidden. Many possibilities occurred to me; but the end of all was that there had been a mistake; that the young lady was deeply concerned about Murray Davenport's fate; and that Larcher saw her frequently."

"I went out and walked the streets and thought the situation over. Had I—had Davenport—the distinction between the two was just then more difficult to preserve—mistakenly imagined himself deprived of that which was of more value than anything else in life? Had he—in throwing off the old past, thrown away that precious thing beyond recovery? How precious it was, I now know, and felt to the depths of my soul, as I paced the night and wondered if this outcome was Fate's last cruellest joke at Murray Davenport's expense. What should I do? Could I remain constant to the cherished design, so well laid so painfully carried out, and still keep back to the past, surrendering happiness I might otherwise lay claim to? How that happiness lurked me! I couldn't give it up. But the great design—should all that skill and labor count to nothing? The physical transformation of face couldn't be undone that was certain. Would that alone be a bar between me and the coveted happiness? My heart sank at the question. But if the transformation should prove such a bar, the problem would be solved at last. I must then stand by the accomplished design. And meanwhile, there was no reason why I should yet abandon it. To think of going back to the old unhappy name and history!—It was asking too much!"

"Then came the idea on which I acted. I would try to reconcile the alternatives—to stand true to the design and yet obtain the happiness. Murray Davenport should not be recalled. Francis Turl should remain and should play to win the happiness for himself. I would change my plans somewhat, and stay in New York for a time. The first thing to do was to find you, Miss Kenby. This was easy. As Larcher was in the habit of seeing you, I had only to follow him about, and after watch the houses where he called. Knowing where he lived, and his favorite resorts, I had never any difficulty in getting on his track. In that way, I came to keep an eye on his house, and finally to see your father let himself in with a door key. I found it was a boarding house, took the room I still occupy, and managed very easily to throw myself in your father's way. You know the rest, and how through you I met Miss Hill and Larcher. In this room also, I have had the experience of meeting Mr. Bagley."

"And what of his money?" asked Florence.
"That has remained a question. It is still undecided. No doubt a third person would hold that, though Bagley morally owed that amount, the creditor was not justified in paying himself by a breach of trust. But the creditor himself, looking at the matter from the other side—"

The Stomach Needs Help

The liver, kidneys and bowels must be kept active with DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.
The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.
There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.
With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.
You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment. One pill a dose, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edman, Bates & Co., Toronto.

ter with feeling rather than thought, was sincere enough in considering the case at least debatable. As for me, you will say, if I am Francis Turl, I am logically a third person. Even so, the idea of restoring the money or Bagley seems against nature. As Francis Turl, I ought not to feel so strongly Murray Davenport's claims, perhaps; yet I am in a way his heir. Not knowing what my course would ultimately be, I adopted the fiction that my claim to certain money was in dispute—that a decision might deprive me of it. I didn't explain, of course, that the decision would be my own. If the money goes back to Bagley, I must depend solely upon what I can earn. I made up my mind not to be versatile in my vocations, as Davenport had been; to rely entirely on the one which seemed to promise most. I have to thank you, Larcher, for having caused me to learn what that was, in my former deg—in the person of Murray Davenport. You see how the old and new selves will still overlap; but the confusion doesn't harm my sense of being Francis Turl as much as you might imagine; and the lapses will necessarily be fewer and fewer in time. Well, I felt I could safely fall back on my ability as an artist in black and white. But my work should be of a different line from that which Murray Davenport had followed—not only to prevent recognition of the style, but to accord with my new outlook—with Francis Turl's outlook on the world. That is why my work has dealt with the comedy of life. That is why I elected to do comic sketches, and shall continue to do them. It was necessary, if I decided against keeping the Bagley money, that I should have funds coming in soon. What I received—what Davenport received for illustrating your articles, though it made him richer than he had often found himself, had been pretty well used up incidentally to the transformation and my subsequent emergence to the world. So I resorted to you to facilitate my introduction to the market. When I met you here one day, I expressed a wish that I might run across a copy of the Bowditch Shakespeare. Forgive me for the subtle request. I knew it was another piece of my inherited information from Davenport—that you had that book. In that way I drew an invitation to call on you, and the acquaintance that began resulted as I desired. Forgive me for the subtle request. Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.
Gentlemen—In June, 98, I had my hand and wrist bitten and badly mangled by a vicious horse. I suffered greatly for several days and the tooth cuts refused to heal until your agent gave me a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which I began using. The effect was magical: in five hours the pain had ceased and in two weeks the wounds had completely healed, and my hand and arm were as well as ever.
Yours truly,
A. E. ROY,
Carriage Maker,
St. Antoine, P.Q.

WHY should I buy a roofing that needs to be painted over, while I can buy AMATITE which needs no painting?
The outer surface is composed of real mineral matter, which makes painting unnecessary.
With an Amatite Roof on your building you end your roofing troubles. When you buy a roofing that requires frequent painting you begin them.
Smooth roofings that require painting are a nuisance and an expense. When you buy them, you buy trouble—no protection.
