Careful buyers are apt to examine the brand of rubbers shown them before buying. If a trade mark known to mean good quality is stamped on the bottom, the purchase is made with assurance of satisfaction. The Chinese see matters differently, as a writer in The Sunday at Home notes. A mistake was made by a firm who sent out goloshes to China with the names of the makers or importers stamped in Chinese characters on the soles. The printed or written word is regarded with awe, and no Chinaman will throw anything which contains writing or printed matter on the ground where it would be trodden underfoot.
