

The Climax Reached.

REDUCTION PROMISES UNFULFILLED.

The Evening Telegram.
 Sir—I have been over 20 years in this country, and have never seen things in general so bad as they are to-day. Trade, work, houses, and the disposal of fish, have reached the climax in this city. I venture to say never before has trade been so dull and so scarce to obtain. A man who walks Water Street, Middle Street, and other business sections from morning till night and hears the cry "There is no chance of a sale" reports scarcely anything but a fact not enough trade going on to keep full staffs. Take the fish problem. It seems houses are never so hard to obtain as now. It seems to me Newfoundlanders are so one-to-day to look after their interests. Squires, Gogers, Campbell, and other politicians all claim they have good intentions about work, but at all they have never put their intentions, as per manifesto in practice. I wonder do they know they care about the thousands who are walking around seeking employment, most of them on short rations, whilst themselves are on picnics and amusements of the people? They are not the promised reduction in wages. Where are all their elections? What promises for the betterment of the lower class, the cleaning up of the streets, better roads, better rates on land and sea, enable us to have cheaper food, better schools, better hospitals, and a better Newfoundland? These are the things in sight and conditions are not that ever. Where is Premier's housing plans, (as per manifesto) for working men's homes? Why are they going down in the land of poverty, whilst money is being spent abroad, and for departments of no worth. Now is the time for the Messrs. Collishaw, Dorey, and Anderson, who have housing in view to get busy and so may Government. I venture to say if they began and built houses for the rental plan for the public, for the labouring classes, they would find it the best paying venture had ever known, for houses were needed in this town more than in any other town in the world, and would give a lot of employment. One and all, City Council, Assessor, Government, all, combine! for the betterment of the town, and your fellow man, act. It is to-day for the night is coming when no man can work.
 Yours respectfully,
 PLAY FAIR,
 St. John's, 1922.

Manliness at the Nickel

WILEN MOORE STARS IN "COME ON OVER."
 Expert Hughes has hit the bullseye again with his new Goldwyn "Come On Over," which will be shown at the Nickel Theatre tonight. Its characters are as man and lovable as those in his masterpiece, "The Old Nest," and humour is wholesome and persuasive and infectious and through its shows a vein of Irish wit that Mr. Hughes has been able to bring to the screen in all its delightfulness.

Story is simple, but has the stress and breeziness of a sunrise over one of Ireland's greenest hills. Story starts in Ireland but soon goes to New York and deals with the place of Shane, who leaves his heart, Moyna, behind when he goes to his fortune in the new world. He meets in New York after 10 years, the love affair runs anything but smoothly until a contest of Irish dances is staged. The dances get into their blood, and their lead them together in the dance once in each other's arms, every-thing is straightened out.
 Fred Greene directed this brilliant picture, chief in the cast are W. Moore and Hugh Graves. They are ably assisted by Florence Drew, Farrell MacDonald, James Marshall and others.
