Hay, per ton 8 00 @ For Housekeepers. Except in the flower and vegetable departments the supplies this morning were meagre, and trade was comparatively stagnant. The display of flowers was quite fine, and buyers were more numerous about the florists stands than elsewhere. For transplanting the prices of leading kinds were: Pansies, 10c to 25c per box; petunias, 15c to 20c, and others in much the same ratio. Hand and table bouquets were also exhibited, and found customers quite readily. Butchers' meat was offered in large quantities today. Spring lambs were a shade easier, and sold from $3 50 to $4 50 each. An average midweek trade was conducted in dairy produce, which was supplied in adequate quantities. Very little poul-

Mrs. Bonine will not be a witness before the grand jury.

Toronto, June 3.—The convention of the International Machinists' Union was opened this morning, with 150 delegates from the United States, Mexico and Canada in attendance. The union is growing fast, capita dues from 30,000 members having been paid in connection with the convention. The delegates were welcomed by the mayor and members of the convention. having been paid in connection with the convention. The delegates were welcomed by the mayor and members of the council, and arterwards the convention went into executive session. Many important matters will come up in addition to the questions arising from the strike. During the past two years, through defalcations of officers, $83,429 have been embezzled, and it is proposed to require that all local and general officers handling funds shall provide bonds for the proper performance of their duty. The convention will also vote on the question of abolishing piece-work and increasing the dues of the union to 75 cents a month.

The proceedings at the International Machinists' Convention were of a routine nature, after the reading of the president's address. In his reply to the civic welcome, Mr. O'Connell said there was one matter upon which there could be no retreat. The ten-hour day for machinists was gone forever, and as a result of the strike inaugurated on May 20, 150,000 men would hereafter work only nine hours a day. The president announced that there was gone forever, and as a result of the strike inaugurated on May 20, 150,000 men would hereafter work only nine hours a day. The president announced that there are two clauses in the agreement of the association with the National Metal Trades' Association which he does not approve of—one to the effect that the employer shall be free to employ any man, union or non-union, but that he shall not discriminate against a union man, and the other giving the employer absolute power to determine the question of competency. He recommended that this agreement be taken up for consideration, and a conference arranged for with the National Metal Trades' Association.

The strike news received today at headquarters was chiefly of the signing of the agreement by prominent firms. The Providence Engineering Company, employing 300 men, signed. In Philadelphia, three considerable firms, and in Plainfield, N. J., one firm signed. In Chicago, it is stated officially, only 1,500 men are out. The strike of the machinists in the shipbuilding yards at Newport News, McConnell regards as important, because while there are only 300 men employed in the yards. In many other smaller shipyards the men are out, and a nine-hour day in all seems probable.

WHOM TO MARRY

Max O'Reli Advises Young Men on the Subject-Don't Marry a Woman Who Can't Appreciate a Joke.

In two preceding articles, one on Advice to Young Men About to Marry" and another on "Selection of Partners," I dwelt on the qualities that a man should seek in a future wife. In a third article I took the liberty of condemning long engage-ments, holding the opinion that though during the period of an engagement young couples may try ever so hard to study each other, they fail to learn how to know each other, and I at-tempted to prove why. In this article I should like to content myself with giving a few hints on how to learn the character of a woman from her external appearance.

Phrenology is making progress, and I have witnessed marvelous descriptions of character derived from the feeling of the bumps; but when you take a fancy to a girl you cannot say to her: "Now, I think I might get very fond of you and ask you to marry me, but before going any further I will take you to a phrenologist and hear what he has to say on your bumps." The girl might resent it. There are women who do not like to be trotted out. Of course, you might say to her: "Oh, but I will submit to the operation myself." This would only be fair, but somehow it is not a very delicate and fascinating manner of starting a love affair. Besides, there would be unpleasant risks to run. The phrenologist might say of you before the girl: "You are not a murderer, but you are inquisitive." Marry a woman smaller than your-

If she wakes up with a frown, saying: "What is it?" don't marry her; she is neither amiable nor cheerful. This test is an infallible one. Half awake, half asleep, she has no time to think; she reveals herself.

If a woman is sulky and consumes her own smoke, don't marry her. Don't marry a girl who has society manners. The girl who keeps her best frowns for the family circle is not fit for matrimony. While you are engaged to her she may treat you as kindly as she does strangers; but you may be sure when she is married to you she will treat you as she does the est of the family.

Marry a woman who has a soft voice and looks you straight in the face when she speaks to you.

If when you call on a woman she keeps you waiting half an hour in order to appear absolutely irreproachable before you, do not marry her. If she comes down at once, such as she is, with her hair quickly rolled and fastened together and a dressing-gown on, that woman is natural, unconventional and considerate. Marry her, especially if she does not apologize to you for appearing en neglige, which, after all, is a compliment she is paying to you.

If a girl is called by her brothers Ted, Tom, Mich or Dick, marry her; she is a good fellow. Marry a girl who shows her fondness for the other sex by the sweet attentions she pays to her father. Marry a girl who takes an interest in his study or any other sanctum he may have at home and likes to sit with him or by him, on his knees especially, pulling his nose and mustache and calling him by some outrageously stupid and familiar pet name. The girl who flirts with her father, who does not allow him to go out without examining him carefully, arranges his cravat, who sees that his coat does not show above his overcoat, who takes off little bits from his clothes, and who, when she is satisfied with his general appearance, kisses him good-bye, that girl will be a lovely wife. Happy the father who has her! Happy the husband who will have her!

Arsenic in Clothing.

[From the London Chronicle.] The fact that arsenic is liable to be found in certain articles of clothing, and that it is capable of inducing skin ailments under certain circumstances, has long been known to the medical world. The most recent information afforded us on this head is that supplied by Drs. Tunnicliffe and Rosenheim on the amount of arsenic which is liable to be contained in black woolen stickings. The arsenic, it appears, originally made its appearance in connection with analine dyes. On this ac-count a German law, I learn, forbids

Most of them bore on the difficulties which beset the path of the reformer who, when he is not treated with contumely, is woefully misunder-Under the second empire, and before he began his campaign against tobacco, M. Decroix, in whom the missionary spirit was indeed strong, started a crusade in favor of eating horseflesh. His ideas, in spite of the untiring energy with which he promulgated them, seemed to make little or no headway. In his despair at his scant success he decided to appeal to Napoleon III. in person. He addressed a long report to the emperor, setting forth in detail the undreamed-of advantages of a horse meat diet, and humbly requesting the sovereign to give the matter calls on you to immediately apologize his attention and to intervene in favor of ideas which would redound to the well-being of his subjects. He recalled how Louis XVI. had established the reputation of the long despised potato by wearing its flower in his button-hole; a word of approbation from his majesty might dispel the prejudice against the horse. M. Decroix was a veterinary surgeon in the army at the time, and a very few days after the dispatch of his report he was sum-moned to appear before Marshal Vaillant, the master of the imperial house-hold. He found the marshal beside himself with rage and indignation. "So you, sir," he roared as Decroix entered his room, "are the person who proposes that the emperor should eat horse meat! You must be out of your senses The emperor eat horse meat!" The marshal was at a loss for further words in which to express his stupefaction, and he motioned Decroix out of his presence with a gesture which the bear hunting.

The first morning Withee let the dogs out for a run while he was getting the breakfast, expecting them to be back in a short time. When breakfast was over the dogs had not returned, so taking his gun Withee started out in the direction they had taken. After traveling about a mile the faint barking of dogs could be heard, and it was then plain why the dogs had not returned. They had scented game and were in pursuit. The sound of the barking led him far up the side of a mountain, and soon he came in sight of the dogs standing around the upturned roots of a tree. Mr. Withee crept up cautiously until within about fifteen feet of a cave that was near by, and then a black, shaggy head could be seen just above the roots. Taking good alm, he fired his 44-caliber and awaited results. After several minutes he went up to the cave, and what he saw there gave him a shock from which he has never re-covered. Two bears lay dead and two more were so stunned that a few quick passes with a knife settled them. For the four bears Mr. Withee received $20 bounty, $27.50 for their hides and $42 for the bear oil, making $89.50
