

Sir M. Herbert Passes Away

British Ambassador to Washington Dies Suddenly in Europe.

Tribute Paid to the Deceased's Memory by Lord Alverstone.

Davos Platz, Switzerland, Sept. 30.—Sir Michael Herbert, the British ambassador to the United States, died at 1.30 this afternoon. He had gradually been growing worse since his arrival here, but his death was sudden and unexpected.

London, Sept. 30.—A despatch from Paris on September 12th said that Lady Herbert, wife of the British ambassador at Washington, was devotedly nursing her delicate husband back to health at Davos Platz, where he had been with the hope of restoring her husband, Lady Herbert was lingering at Davos, though the doctor was despondent at that time of the year.

Lady Herbert was formerly Miss Lelia Wilson, daughter of Richard T. Wilson, the New York banker, and is related to the Vanderbilts, Ogdens and Golets and Astors.

The death of Sir Michael Herbert was announced at today's session of the Alaskan Boundary Commission by Chief Justice Alverstone. It was supposed that the ambassador had been suffering from a rapid consumption, from which the ambassador had been recovering.

Counsel was in the middle of his argument when Lord Alverstone suddenly held up his hand, stopped the proceedings, and with intense emotion said: "The members of the tribunal have just learned with deepest sorrow of the death of Sir Michael Herbert, who in behalf of Great Britain, negotiated and signed the treaty by which this tribunal was constituted and under which it is at present sitting. I cannot trust myself to express the feeling of grief which this announcement has caused to every member of this tribunal and to many others who had the great privilege of Herbert's friendship."

The chief justice then paused for a moment, and then resumed: "It is no exaggeration to say that no man ever brought to the discharge of his duties more high ideals and more noble qualifications. His majesty and the British nation have lost a devoted public servant and a man whose life was a model of personal integrity."

The dramatic scene which followed was broken by Jacob Dickinson, who rose and expressed in behalf of the bar and people of the United States intense sorrow at the death of a man whose noble character Lord Alverstone had so fittingly described.

Mr. Dickinson moved the commission adjourn for a few days to enable the members to pay their respects to the late ambassador.
