

or any other programme of a literary character, shall be appointed, and these appointments shall be announced at the preceding ordinary meeting. Any member so appointed who is unable to take part in the proceedings, shall notify the Recording Secretary without delay, in order that another may be substituted in his place.

Any member appointed and notified, who fails to take the part assigned to him, without giving a satisfactory reason in writing, shall have his name entered in the minutes of the meeting as a defaulter.

When the name of any member has been twice entered as a defaulter in the same session, the Corresponding Secretary or other officer of the Society shall, after notice to the defaulting member, move at the next meeting of the Society, that his name be struck from the roll of membership. Such motion to be carried shall receive a three-fourths vote of the members present at such meeting.

Essays and papers read before the Society, or copies thereof, shall be left with the Recording Secretary, and kept among the records of the Society.

In article 23 read "thirty" instead of "fifteen" minutes, as the time allowed for an Essay.
