Poetry.

There's Beauty in Everything.

BY MARY S. LUCE.

ere's beauty in the forest tree Phat proudly waves its head, d throws its darkening shadows o'er Phe modest violet's bed.

There's beauty in each stream that glides Serenely towards the sea, The mirrors on its glassy breast, Each floweret, shrub and tree,

That deck its banks, and bow their heads To kiss the sparkling wave; And beauty in each bird that seeks In cooling stream to lave.

There's beauty in the flitting cloud, And in the deep blue sky ; There's beauty rare in all that's made By Him who reigns on high.

I like to see an open, honest hear Where frankness loves to dwe Which has no room for base dec Nor hollow words can tell ; But in whose throbbings plain ar The invest of the wird nport of the mind, ents true and kind.
