A 1908 MODEL MALE TRIES ON 1922 STRAW HATS

(By Foster Ware in the New York Evening Post.)

This story is for men only. It is about hats. No, ladies, not the kind that you are interested in, but that prosaic article of commerce the man's straw hat, model of 1922.

I have just come from my daily visit to the hat store. It is one habit that I have contracted since May 15. On and after that date most of my friends blossomed out in their new straws. I want to blossom out, too. Every day I go to a hat store with a view to blossoming out.

The number of hats I have tried on in this way would probably not be believed. I am convinced that if I had had time to end the hats I have met would reach from here to next September 15, when, as custom prescribes, the tenure of office on the human dome expires. But the strange thing about it is that while I have met hundreds of straw hats intimately and have accumulated a wealth of knowledge about the new styles, their up-to-dateness, their correctness, their appropriateness in summer, their general all-around "nobbliness"—everything, in fact, that a man could possibly want to know about a straw hat—I have not yet succeeded in acquiring the hat itself. I have not yet made the acquaintance of one that meets all requirements.

One of Nature's Bad Breaks.

The trouble, it appears, is not with the hats, but with me. There is nothing whatever the matter with the hats. I have talked with too many hat salesmen to entertain any false notions on that score. The "very latest" in 1922 straws are all perfect products and show what the hat manufacturer can do when he tries.

No! I understand it, the fault lies with Nature. When Nature designed a type of human on the lines of the Woolworth Tower, Nature apparently overlooked the fact that in 1922 it would become practically impossible for an individual of this type to put on a new straw hat without creating a public scandal. That is the sad predicament in which we of the long-drawn-out school of architecture find ourselves.

Take the smart Ding Dong straw, (you know, one with the growing crown), or that all-but-brimless model that rests so jauntily on the dome of the Younger Cake Eating set. Leave it to any fair-minded jury—it is fair to ask an elongate to adorn his head-piece thus? I have tried them both, many times. I have seen others try them. I saw a customer who with a dead ring for William G. McAdoo project his erie head into a Ding Dong and the memory of it haunts me. I saw a tall, poetic-looking person with spreading ears and a temperamental nose innocently try to fit himself into 85 worth of brimless straw. He tells me it was days before he regained his self-respect.

"Come now," you say, "it cannot be as bad as all that."

But is it. If anything, it is worse. Surely, thought I, in the first few days of my pilgrimage, in a great city like New York there must be hats enough and to spare for all—hats for every head, hats that will team up with the most exacting cephalic index.

I was young then and inexperienced. I did not know what the hat designers were capable of. I know better now. Even so, I have not abandoned all hope. While I am not so sure as I was that the 1922 hat market and I am on mind. I am ready to be shown. Somewhere, I suspect, there is a hat dealer who has conserved about his shop or person a hat that I can without shame call my own. He's the man I'm looking for. When I find him he shall not escape. He will probably not want me to take the hat. He will advise against it, but I shall be firm. I shall not be tricked or trifled with. Nothing shall thwart me. When once I meet that hat it shall be mine. The salesman who attempts to keep it from me does so at his own risk. This is my ultimatum.

W. N. TILLEY JOINS C. P. R. DIRECTORATE

(Montreal Gazette.) Directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway at a meeting here yesterday, appointed W. N. Tilley, K. C., of Toronto, to the vacancy on the board created by the death of the late Sir John Eaton of that city.

Mr. Tilley was appointed consulting counsel of the C. P. R. in December, 1918, an office then newly created in connection with the law department of the system. He has long been a prominent figure in Canadian law, especially in connection with railways, in which he has specialized. Mr. Tilley is head of the law firm of Tilley, Johnston, Thomson and Perimeter, and is a Bencher of the Law Society of Ontario. He was created a K. C. in 1913.

FEATURE EXPORT TRADE. For the first time in the history of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, one session of the annual meeting will be held on June 20-23 at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea will be practically entirely given over to a consideration of the subject of export trade. Arrangements are being made to have several prominent bankers, transportation men and exporters present to deliver addresses on various aspects of the subject. During the past year there has been a remarkable growth in the interest taken by Canadian manufacturers in export trade, and this has been especially manifested in the formation, under the auspices of the C. M. A., of export questions and discussing problem encountered by exporters. Membership in these clubs has already attained large proportions.

POLAND'S GRAIN CROPS. Expected to Harvest 95 Per Cent. of Last Year's Yield.

Poland's winter grain crops, according to figures just made public by the Polish Chief Statistical Office, were in such a condition at the end of March that it was estimated that the yield would be at least ninety-five per cent. as great as last year, when the harvest was considered very good.

Occasional frosts and low temperature during April did a certain amount of harm to the winter crops. In tabulating the information gathered, the statistical office classed the crops under five heads, according to condition: five, representing excellent; four, good; three, moderate; two, fair, and one, poor. The winter wheat crop for the whole of Poland, under the above classification, or represented by the figures 2.9. Winter rye showed a little better figure, 1. 6-8. Winter barley, winter rape and clover showed figures respectively, 2.5, 2.3, 2.4, meadows being 2.6 and pastures 2.4.

The damage to the winter grain crops was comparatively limited, the data gathered by the statistical office indicating that not more than 2.5 per cent. of the area sown to winter wheat was damaged and had to be plowed again. The winter rye crop was damaged to the extent of only 0.9; winter barley, 0.7; winter rape, 1.2. The damage to clover was more serious, 17.9 of the area sown to clover having to be replowed.

NEW LAWS PROTECT EYES. Blindness Among Children and Babies Decreasing, Report Shows.

New York, June 15.—The enactment of State laws relating to the prevention of blindness among babies and children is having a most beneficial effect, the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness reports in predicting that the day of blind babies is passing and, in fact, the most prolific cause of this blindness, ophthalmia neonatorum, will be a forgotten disease. The summary of these reports shows that is forty-four states the reporting of babies' sore eyes to local health officers is now compulsory. The only states in which such legislation has not been enacted are Arizona, Nevada, Texas and Wyoming.

The use of prophylactic "drops" in the eyes of infants at birth is now required by law of physicians and midwives in twenty-four states and by midwives and nurses in two states. Free prophylactic outfits are distributed in twenty-eight states and popular education is directed on the prevention of infantile blindness are distributed by state health departments in thirty-five states. In only seventeen states, however, are births reported early enough to be of assistance in the prevention of blindness work.

A comparison of laws now enacted with those passed before 1918 indicates a most gratifying improvement in legislative action," the association reports.

A similar law was recently put into effect in New Brunswick.
