SOUTH STIRRED BY SENSATIONAL MURDER TRIAL

Widow of Wealthy Citizen, Accused of Attempt on His Life, Says There is Another Woman in the Case

Atlanta, July 22—The trial of Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Opie Grace, accused of attempting to murder her husband, Eugene H. Grace, as he lay drugged in bed, and for the past five months the central figure in one of the most amazing cases that ever stirred the south, opens today in this city. It is expected that the trial will witness one of the most sensational ever held in this state.

Mrs. Grace, formerly the widow of a wealthy Philadelphia merchant and known in that city as "Daisy of the Leopard Spot," is held in the bar enclosure during the trial. Facing her will be her husband, seated in an invalid's chair. The lower part of his body is completely paralyzed.

Grace who is able to sit brought from the hospital to the courtroom today, accuses his wife of shooting him to obtain $27,000 worth of insurance he had taken out on his life for her benefit. The excitement of the trial, the doctors fear, will have a serious effect on Grace.

In the case today appear some of the best known lawyers in the south. Interest in the trial is nationwide, not only because of the prominence of the wife in society circles, but chiefly because of the mystery which surrounded the shooting of Grace on March 4 last, in his Atlanta home.

Grace, who is 28 years old and who married the wealthy widow a year ago, is bitter in pressing his accusation.

Mrs. Grace, who is 47, maintains her innocence. "There is another woman involved in the case," she says. "If I were tried the world will know all about her. I will tell the whole miserable story on the stand."

The description exactly fits Bennett, and provincial detective Acton and aides are at the reserve this morning searching for the fugitive. The American police have been notified and are watching the American shore.

THOUSANDS OF MEDALS UNCLAIMED

Fifty Thousand War Badges Are Stored at Woolwich

NEARLY ALL FOR BOER WAR

Still Some Won in Zulu and Crimean Battles Never Called For—Waterloo Was First Occasion of General Issue

(Pearson's Weekly)

The fact that there are no fewer than 50,000 medals stored at Woolwich, awaiting claimants, causes one to wonder whether the soldier puts so high a value on medals as is usually supposed. The medals were issued by the War Office, endeavoring to trace the owners. Besides these Boer War medals, there are 4,000 medals for the Zulu War which have never been claimed, and even in this day, belated claims are still put in for medals for the Crimea and India Mutiny.

A short time ago, for example, a veteran named James Crystal, applied for and received a medal which he had earned in a battle of the Boer War. He had not been able to find out that he was entitled to it until after a lapse of thirty years.

Most of the Boer War medals at Woolwich belong to irregulars who joined on the outbreak of the war, and after it was over, scattered all over the world. But many regulars have not troubled to claim the medal, alleging that it is too "cheap," and considering that 700,000 of the medals were struck, it is certainly never likely to become a rarity.

Before the days of Waterloo very few medals were issued, and those that were highly valued. The first medal ever issued was that given to the Elizabethan seaman who defeated the Armada, and the earliest military decoration was a silver badge issued by Charles I. in 1643 for prosecution to soldiers who had distinguished themselves in forlorn hopes.

Waterloo was the first occasion when there was a general issue of medals, and since that time, instead of issuing too few medals, we have gone, perhaps, to the other extreme. Soldiers who have been in the same decoration is awarded to the man who has been fighting at the front and carrying his life in his hands for months, as to the man in a regiment which has never stirred from the base of operations or so much as seen the enemy. Every effort is made by the authorities to see that medals reach their owners, and that the owner of a medal which is to be dead, the medal is forwarded to his next of kin. Yet there are still large numbers unclaimed, and according to the regulations now in force, at the end of ten years time the medals will be broken up and the silver debased to the mint.

The Victoria Cross, of course, is a decoration of quite another character, and a soldier would see soon that of parting with his life as with his V.C. But this is far from being the case with other medals, and Richard Kipling tells how he has seen soldiers waver their Indian General Service medals on the toes for the price of a pot of beer.

MILLINERY FOR THE HORSE

NATIONS UNITE TO INVESTIGATE STEAM TRAWLERS

Canada, U. S. and Newfoundland Appoint Commission For The Purpose

Ottawa, July 23—With a view to investigating the oft repeated charges that steam trawling is destructive and will eventually end in the total killing off of the fish supply the governments of Canada, Newfoundland and the United States have decided to appoint competent officers to personally probe into and report upon the matter. The department of marine and fisheries will send two officers on a fishing expedition with steam trawlers so that the information secured will be first hand and reliable.

Since the advent of steam trawlers on the Grand Banks and other North Atlantic waters protests have been received again and again that the new system was by catching young, immature fish, rapidly operating towards the killing off of the supply. Owing to international agreements it was difficult for the Canadian government to place any restriction on Canadian steam trawlers as the system was allowed by the United States government as well as by the government of Newfoundland and a change would necessarily involve international complications. They again said that if the Dominion government prohibited the system it would necessarily place its fishermen at a serious disadvantage with the fishermen of other countries. Last winter the question was brought up and debated in the house, it being held by some of the members that according to the most reliable information obtainable steam trawling was not injurious. It was pointed out that the new system has been carried on in the North Sea for many years, without the slightest reduction of the fish supply. The matter, however, was taken up with the United States and Newfoundland governments and the present arrangement has been arrived at. The step is an important one as it involves large interests in the three countries.

TOO MUCH CONFIDENCE

The young fellow with the ink marks on his fingers edged over to the natty-tressed youth with whom he was sharing the bleacher seat.

"I told the boss," he began confidently, "that some old yarn about my dead aunt to get to the game, and he never said a word. Battelheimer, his name is. Regular old skinflint, too; but I know how to pull the wool over his eyes, and believe me, I never lose a chance to do it. By the way, did you give your boss the same story?"

"No."

"Played sick, I guess? I often do that."

"Told him you had private business to attend to, maybe? I work that game, too."

"No."

"Had some one telephone and say your father was dying? That's one of my favorites."

"No, I—"

"What did you tell him? Must be a new one on me."

"I didn't tell him anything. I'm Battelheimer's son!"
