Nesteroday afternoon the association interacted to a very instructive address by Rev. E. of Miller, on "First Aid to the Weunded," a subject where the gave a land and the reverend general public and the reverence and the r

Lynch, the victim of the deplorable accident, whose remains were conveyed to the Sound steamer dock, from whence they were taken on the steamer Majestic to Seattle, en route to Spokane. The services were conducted at the department headquarters in the presence of almost all the city firemen and the visiting chiefs. Rev. Father Kennedy officiated, delivering a very impressive address. His reference to the perils constantly threatening the fireman in his work brought home the fireman in his work brought home the fact that it is not only on the battle-field that heroes are to be found.

The coffin was placed on No. 3 hose wagon, which was draped in black. There were some beautiful floral offer; ings, among them a wreath from the Fire Chiefs' Association and another of ful proceeding following upon the unfor-tunate tragedy of Wednesday. It was Sound and the Straits of Fuca is annually obliterated from the wealth of the Sound and the Straits of Fuca is annually obliterated from the wealth of the world—a sum representing all the wealth mined from Alaska since its discovery and discounting its production for years to come, at the same measure of yield; when we consider that this vast sum is annually lost by fire, with not a single compensating feature—lost to the world as entirely as if dropped to the bottom of mid-ocean; when it is known that in definance of the progress made in fire-fighting equipment and the almost reckless courage shown by, our band of firemen throughout the entire country (for no locality has a monopoly on such) that these enormous losses are yearly increasing, it would appear that if these fires be controlled it must be by other methods than simply attempting their extinguishment.

I bear in mind that this is a chlefs' convention, a body of men whose muster roll no longer contains my name. It was, however, when associated with you that the question of prevention has been so frequently a matter of discussion, and with a view of greater publicity we have invited the city councils and the mayors of cities in which our meetings have been held. They have listened to our discussions and taken part in them. The seed has been sown in good ground and we should expect an abundant harvest. Already several of the cities have passed excellent ordinances and incorporated into their building laws restrictions for the better prevention of fires. All of these have been the legitimate result of our association the mayors of cities in which our meetings have been held. Carelessness is a crime. A corporation, by reason of laxity of ordinary precautions in the conduct of its business, is liable to damages by injury of the workmen employed. Careless handling of fire arms resulting in death or injury is punishable by law. But I know of no law to punish a man that carelessly sets a fire, even if it consumes the whole block. Happily, however, I see the light ahead. It cannot be expected the idea of prevention will sweep the country as did the news of Dèwey's victory, but the sentiment is growing, fire prevention is being studied, and the results (locally as yet) are becoming apparent.
