ST. JOHN STAR.

ST. JOHN, N. B., DECEMBER 2, 1901.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

The board of trade of Worcester, Mass., has 455 members, and the Spj, which devotes a long article to the board and its work for the industrial and commercial benefit of the city, says it believes the membership will soon be 600. Now that the winter season is on, the St. John board should put forth an extra effort to increase its membership and arouse a more general interest in matters pertaining to the welfare of this city and port. The more united effort and intelligent discussion of questions affecting our trade and manufacturing industries there is among the business men of a town the more likely it is to grow as a centre of trade and industry. Competition is keen, and there must be more than individual effort and shrewdness to bring a city to the front and win for it a reputation for enterprise and progressive ideas. A board of trade is an excellent medium through which to impress upon the people of other communities the fact that a city is really keeping pace with the times. The St. John board has in the past done notable work for the good of this port, and it deserves well of the merchants and manufacturers and those engaged in transportation. There is no reason why the board should not become the greatest factor in the industrial development of the city. Men with trained faculties and larger experience in business affairs, with a thorough knowledge of the field of operations and ideas of their own as to how the industrial field can best be exploited should come together in the board rooms and unite their efforts. The board has now a central location and large and well-equipped rooms. The time is opportune for a campaign along the line of enlarged membership and increased interest in its work.

GROWING FRIENDLINESS.

A cable on Saturday said that at a Thanksgiving dinner in London the English and Americans made it rather uncomfortable for the French ambassador by dwelling with enthusiasm upon the idea of an Anglo-American alliance which would dominate the world. There are many evidences that the American people take kindly to the fact of more cordial relations than formerly between the two nations. One even discovers it in current fiction. The leading feature of the last issue of the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post is a short Filipino war story in which the heroine is saved for her American soldier lover by the forcible interposition of several English gentlemen in Manila, whose fists are as ready as their hearts are courageous at the critical moment. The author of the story is Gen. Charles King. In times past American statesmen were wont rather to enlarge upon the friendship between their country and France than that between their country and England. That was a survival of the old revolutionary feeling, and was of course natural; but it lacked the heartiness of the present friendly regard between the leading spirits of Britain and the states, which all ardent patriots in both countries hope will grow in strength and potency.

THE U. S. CONGRESS.

The session of the United States congress which began today is especially interesting because there is a new president to deliver a message, and because curiosity has been aroused concerning the attitude he may assume toward reciprocity—the question so frankly discussed by the late President McKinley in his last important public utterance. Aside from this question of reciprocity, there is that of the relation of the federal power toward anarchy and anarchists. A law relating to this subject and to immigration will doubtless be enacted. Legislation dealing with trusts and combines will, of course, be introduced, and there will be more or less attack upon the tariff. The Itzhmian canal will be made the subject of discussion, and possibly provision will be made for its construction. The ship subsidy bill will arouse a warm controversy. Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines will furnish cause for much talk and some legislation. The congress which is now in session will therefore have to deal with gray and important matters, and its course will be noted with very keen interest by other nations as well as by the people directly interested. The rest of the world is much more interested in American affairs now than was the case a few years ago. American activity in the world's markets have aroused not only the curiosity but the self-interest of other powers.

Elwood, Indiana, says an exchange has accepted a $25,000 gift for a library from Andrew Carnegie, agreeing to release $2,500 annually for its support, provided the institution may be known as the Elwood Public Library. It is said that the name was chosen to placate some of the labor organizations which were opposed to accepting the money. It has been customary for cities and towns accepting libraries from Mr. Carnegie to name the institutions in his honor. With every steamship berth at Sand Point occupied, and grain and other produce and manufactured goods, horses, cattle, hay and lumber going rapidly into the ships for export, we have a pleasant realization of what it means to be the chief winter port of Canada.

SHOT HIM DEAD.

Result of a Quarrel Between Two Parrisboro Shore Men.

PARRISBORO, N. S., Dec. 1.—Parrisboro Shore is very much excited over a fatal shooting affray, James Spicer and John Spicer, farmers and fishermen, living at Parrisboro, were shot a short distance below Spencer's Cove, and put in charge of the police. They have had trouble for a number of years over property lines, and were engaged about seventy feet apart, shot in the left breast and instantly killed. James Spicer was in the woods where the shooting place and got John Spicer by the woods and assist in pulling out his body, which was taken to the hospital. P. O. who telephoned to the coroner. Dr. Rand, arrived down this morning, and an inquest was held this afternoon. J. Frank Outhill, of Logan, Jenks & Outhill, appeared for Spicer, who is about 40 years old, and made no attempt to escape. Three witnesses were sworn. John B. Gass testified as follows: On Saturday afternoon, between three and four o'clock James Spicer called and sent a boy in to call me out. I went out, and Spicer said, "I want you to bring your team as quick as you can to my road in the woods to bring out Spicer's body." He asked him where he was, and he said, "He is lying under a tree where I shot him." Spicer then rode away, saying he would have others there to help. I did not know exactly where to go, and waited. We found the body lying on its back lifeless. We two carried it to the road and put it in the carriage. I drove to Dr. Fillmore's, under the impression that he was a coroner. Finding he was not, I gave Mr. Atkinson charge of the body.

Questioned by the coroner: I saw an axe standing against a tree close to the body. There was a belt with knife and sheath on deceased, which James Spicer took. All that James Spicer told me was that he shot the man in self-defence. I was well acquainted with deceased. I never saw him with belt and sheath before. We used the belt to strap the body on the wagon. James Spicer said he had been working in the woods. Axe and knife produced and identified by witness. Francis Morris sworn: James Spicer came to my house yesterday afternoon about three o'clock and wanted me to come and help put a body in a wagon. He told me he had shot deceased. I advised him to go to A. W. Atkinson. He said he had, but deceased had an axe drawn, and he shot him in self-defence. Burton Spicer, son of deceased, sworn: Identified belt and axe as his father's. Said he had seen him wear the belt several times. His father went to the woods yesterday morning for a load of wood. Did not know where he was in the afternoon. Knew there was trouble between his father and James Spicer. The verdict returned was that deceased came to his death from a gun in the hands of James Spicer. James Spicer said he had grown out of long continued trouble between the two men. The deceased is described as a somewhat passionate man.

THAT THANKSGIVING DINNER

At which the French Ambassador Had to Listen and Smile.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Three hundred guests assembled this evening for the Thanksgiving dinner given under the auspices of the American Society in London. John Morgan Richards was in the chair. Paul Cambon the French ambassador to Great Britain proposed the health of President Roosevelt. Mr. Cambon paid a feeling tribute to the late President McKinley, whose death he said, had shocked France and knit its sister republics in closer bonds of sympathy and sorrow. While President Roosevelt was an unknown quantity in the world, said Mr. Cambon, his was a cultured, energetic and charming personality, and his elevation to the presidency had been received in France with the happiest anticipations of carrying on the cordial relations which had existed between the two countries for over a century past. Justice Walton paid a high tribute to Mr. White's efforts to promote good feeling between Great Britain and the United States. Mr. White, replying, said he had long been acquainted with the cordial feeling Great Britain entertained for the United States and that he regretted that Joseph H. Choate, American ambassador to Great Britain, who had done so much to cultivate these relations, was not present at this Thanksgiving dinner. Mr. White said it was the time for family talks and that he hoped to be forgiven if he referred to that American property which made the American treasury the envy of the world.

If America's friendship for Great Britain was pronounced, this did not mean, said Mr. White, that America's friendship for France was not very great.

A. Conan Doyle produced perhaps the greatest effect of the evening by declaring the pendulum of the English speaking world has now swung to somewhat between New York and Chicago. "There is no use in disguising this important fact," continued Mr. Doyle, "yet, if the English speaking races should become impelled to meet a common foe, the world would soon see how quickly these same English speaking people would close up their ranks and march shoulder to shoulder for the advancement of civilization." Anthony Hope, the novelist, said the only thing which remained to be done

THE FAITHLESS BOERS.

(Toronto World.) Kruger still laughs at the idea of the Boers surrendering. The British have captured 53,000 Boers. Where do the fighters come from? The fact is that rebels and traitors are everywhere in South Africa, and British soldiers are being killed every day by supposed loyal burghers. Every Boer prisoner taken should be held; every man who violates his parole should be transported, and every traitor caught should be shot. The Boer has proved that he cannot be trusted to keep his most solemn oath.

MR. SPOONER'S VIEWS. About New Brunswick Lawyers and Their Habits.

The Frontier News and Island Press, published at Eastport by Clarence Spooner, late of Hampton and Sussex, thus discusses New Brunswick lawyers and their ways: "The usual large batch of law students and attorneys-at-law have been gazetted by the St. John papers. The reason why so many of the young men in the provinces study law, it is said, is because they only need one case a year to give them a living, and as all become fairly well-to-do in a few years there must be something in it. Then the local government, which is composed mostly of the legal fraternity, have so framed the laws that a resident has to pay a tax on nearly everything but the air he breathes, and indirectly he pays for that. Then when he dies, if he has accumulated a fair share of this world's goods and desires to leave his children for whom he tolled his earnings, the government steps in and demands a huge share for the privilege of his dying in New Brunswick, and when the probate court and the lawyers get their share the estate has dwindled to an alarming degree. In fact a hold-up by a highwayman would be but a trifle more expensive. This is one of the main reasons why there is so much emigration from Canada. Whenever the people get their eyes open to the fact that it is cheaper to leave disputes to arbitration than a change for the better may take place in Canada."

CAN'T STARVE A SCOT. Andrew Carnegie a short time ago was in conversation with a friend who was inclined to be very complimentary. He told Mr. Carnegie what a splendid gift his library was to Edinburgh, and so much more needed than any other charity in the city, as the statistics showed that for a great many years there had not been one death by starvation there.

"That," answered Mr. Carnegie, "does not arise from the number of charities in Edinburgh, but from the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."
