AFTER DYNAMITE THROWER.

The last has not yet been heard of that affair in the North End in which John Scribner dropped a case of dynamite into the trench where the men were working. This affair happened on Wednesday, but as yesterday was devoted to civic court work, the action of the police was postponed. This morning, however, Sergt. Hastings, of the North End division, swore out information against Scribner on the charge of attempting to do serious injury. A warrant was issued and it is probable that the arrest will be made this afternoon.

A SCOTTISH TRIUMPH

The Musical Artists From the Land
o' Cakes Scored a Great Success
Last Night.

Occasionally it happens that St. John people for some unknown reason withhold their patronage from entertainments which prove to be first class. This did not occur last evening and the audience which filled the Opera House got more than their money's worth.

The concert was an enjoyable and artistic success, thoroughly Scotch, and altogether beyond the expectations of even the most enthusiastic.

The most noticeable characteristic of the artists—and this is seen in all—the highly finished manner in which they perform. There is absolutely no straining for effect, no strenuous endeavors to work up enthusiasm, but all are quietly artistic and show every evidence of thorough culture. Taking it as a whole the concert throughout was one of the finest heard here for many a long day and the house should be packed to the doors for this evening's performance.

Of the artists individually nothing but good can be said. The first name on the programme was that of Lawrence Murdoch the pianist. St. John audiences are as a rule accustomed to seeing sweet girls with short fluffy sleeves or stout be-speckled middle aged men do the inevitable thing with which concerts must according to custom commence. Hence there was a rustle of surprise when a comparatively younger man threw himself across the stage and began turning the piano stool as if in preparation for some one else. But it appeared that he was the player, and he can play some too.

Young Murdoch rattles those keys in a manner which quite silvery waves by a college graduate away back in the unwhim shrubbery. He hasn't any particular style, excepting his own, but he surely has ability and no fault could be found either with his execution or expression. It is sufficient to say for the boy's playing that he received a most enthusiastic encore, a very unusual thing for a piano solo in this city.

Mr. Murdoch played all the accompaniments with the same skill and expression as was evidenced in his solo. Then came big smiling George Neil, who was down for Mary of Argye. At the very first note the ears of the audience went up, and stayed that way. It may be remarked right here that in the singing of both Mr. Neil and Miss Craig there is an entire absence of effort. The music simply pours from their throats and fills the building while they stand and just as it comes it is also worthy of note in this particular juncture that neither of these singers say bony for bonnie. This innovation is a relief. They also pronounce Jamie as Jimmie and not with the long accent on the A.

The most peculiar and pleasing quality of Mr. Neil's voice is its resonance and carrying power. There is such an absolute cleanness to the tone that the volume is not noticed, and the voice seems to carry itself along so that the pauses for inspiration are never noticed. Mr. Neil makes no effort at singing, but he is not lacking in expression either of tone or manner. In response to an encore he sang The Auld Scottish Song.

When Miss Craig appeared, those in the audience were struck, as usual, by her appearance. She is pretty, dainty, and of admirable presence, although by no means imposing, and she sings exactly as she looks. Her voice is clear and sweet, best in the lower and middle registers, and under perfect control. She finds herself capable of giving all the necessary expression without any undue exertion and is as agreeable in manner as she is accomplished in song. Her rendition of the stirring old Jacobite song, Bonnie Prince Charlie, brought down the house, and from this she turned to an altogether different style of selection, the pathetic Lullaby of the Leal.

Such was the expression, and this, too, solo was received amid intense feeling, but at the conclusion the pent up feelings of the audience were let loose in applause which must have knocked the wind out of the walls. Miss Craig's performance was so perfect that Mr. Neil was forced to respond to repeated encores on each appearance.

Much had been said of Mackenzie Murdoch, and much was expected. Much was also received. The greatest wonder about this man is that he does not sometimes become abeyant minded and stop to listen to his own music. No one else can do anything but listen when he is singing, and this, too, want to do anything. He knows his instrument from head to chin rest, and it seems to know him just as well. Such playing has not been heard in St. John for many a long day. Murdoch throws his whole soul into it. He fairly bristles all over with expression, and the man's face and attitude correspond perfectly with the music he is making.

He played last night in every position, of his body, but on the violin. He worked in many varieties of execution, and put the real old fashioned Scotch into every note. It was splendid. There isn't any need of telling what he played, for no matter what the selection might be, Murdoch would make a gem of it.

The other member of the company is Harry Munro, a singing and talking comedian. It is something of an innovation to have comic songs given in costume in a concert such as last evening, but while the change from the sublime to the ridiculous seemed unfortunate to some, the audience on the whole enjoyed it. And at times Mr. Munro is funny. He is something of the style of Reuben Fawcett as Posty in the Bonnie Briar Bush, but is not so clever. He gave a number of songs, with a good deal of talking between verses, and was most heartily received. There can be no doubt but that Mr. Munro is clever in his own line, but still there is a contrast between songs such as the Dairyman and the Land of the Leal.

Miss Craig and Mr. Neil appeared in duet in the Crooked Banbury, and in When Ye Gang Awa, Jamie. Both of these were splendidly rendered, as was also Auld Lang Syne, with which the concert closed.

Samuel Schofield said today that he had no information as to what will be done regarding the I. C. R. berth, which has now been formally offered for the use of winter port steamers. The agreement about berths will be made in Montreal between the O. P. R. and Mr. Reford and not by any of the local agents.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Rising arrived home yesterday morning on the Boston express.

ST. JOHN'S TRICENTENARY.

The Three Hundredth Anniversary of the River's Discovery to be Celebrated.

A meeting of the conference to consider the tricentenary celebration was held last evening. Dr. Matthew presided.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting, and, being asked concerning the Royal Society, said that already two meetings of that society had been held away from Ottawa. He thought the society might meet here if satisfactory financial arrangements could be made.

The meeting then discussed suggestions offered for the celebration. Halifax and Annapolis are also arranging for some celebration, and Dr. Raymond, Dr. Matthew and Dr. R. Jack were chosen a committee to confer with those in Nova Scotia. Among the suggestions made for the anniversary were naval and military demonstration, meeting of Royal Society, presence of a distinguished man from that province of France whence came de Montmorency or Champlain, opening of the new library, presence of some prominent Canadian, co-operation with the people of Annapolis and with the United States people who will celebrate the settlement of St. Croix island, old home week, memorial service in churches, demonstration by school children, processions of various societies, an historic pageant representing the landing of Champlain, and the erection of a memorial tablet.

THE MEMORIAL MONUMENT.

Mrs. Baisley has worked so faithfully and untriflingly for the completion of the soldiers' monument in the Memorial Park on Douglas Avenue, in receipt of a letter from the artists in England who are preparing the statue, stating that they hope to be able to send a photograph of the clay model sometime before the end of the year. They also stated in their letter that they had great difficulty in obtaining a suitable uniform, the only thing they were able to get being the torn and much worn uniform of some Canadian soldier who was on his way to Canada from South Africa, and who had pawned it in a Jew shop. That being very unsuitable, they were very glad to receive the uniform sent by Mrs. Baisley as a pattern. It now appears that the statue itself will be completed and set up early next spring.

Mrs. Baisley wishes to thank Col. J. R. Armstrong and also Capt. Beverley R. Armstrong for their kindness in furnishing the uniform referred to.

STUMPAGE INCREASED.

The afternoon meeting of the local government yesterday did not amount to much in the transaction of business. An adjournment was made and the council will be called together again at the call of the chairman. Several of the members had to leave the city.

The committee appointed to deal with the stumpage matter will have their report finished in a day or two. It is said the stumpage rate will be about $1.50 per thousand on spruce pine and cedar and other lumber in proportion.

Coroner's Jury Says McGaw's
Death Was Due to Defective
Condition of Machinery.

The inquest into the death of Herbert L. McGaw, who was killed by the breaking of an emery wheel in McAvity's foundry on Broad street, on Oct. 22 last, was concluded last evening.

John Milley, a furnaceman, sworn, said that the emery wheel whose bursting occasioned the death of young McGaw was not of the wire class.

Ernest Smith, recalled, said that McGaw, previous to the accident that morning, was heard to say "She was going great this morning," by which witness understood he meant that the emery wheel was going too fast. At the time of the accident, witness said, the belt was broken and had been in that condition for some days previously.

B. P. Leonard, superintendent of the fire alarm, who had had experience in the working of emery wheels, was then called. He said that an accident might occur by the man at the wheel allowing his casting to drop between the rest and the wheel. If the governor belt broke the engine would move more quickly and the speed of the emery wheel would be proportionately increased. Witness thought 1,000 revolutions per minute sufficient for a 22-inch wheel.

Richard Tyler, an employee at the McAvity foundry, did not think that the governor belt was broken at the time of the accident. He personally fixed the emery wheel that morning, and left it in first-class condition. The engine was not very powerful and he did not think that a broken belt would increase its speed much.

Dr. Macaulay testified to examining McGaw after death.

Berton B. Meroler, a machinist, said that he repaired the engine just before the accident. He repaired the broken belt after the accident, and his evidence concluded the inquest.

Mr. Walker, the foreman of the McAvity foundry, was recalled, and his evidence concluded the inquest.

Mr. A. Hanington, K. C., addressed the jury on behalf of Messrs. McAvity, and then Coroner Berryman summed up the evidence.

The jury returned the following verdict: That death was caused by the bursting of the emery wheel; that the boys employed at the work were neither properly instructed nor sufficiently cautioned of the danger; that machinery employed was not kept in proper condition to insure safety; and that the wheel was travelling at too great a speed.

TWO BOYS HURT.

Serious Accidents in City Factories
Yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon between four and five o'clock, Harry Dever, Jr., an employee of the Portland Rolling Mills,
was caught in the shafting and whirled around with great force. He was thrown toward the side of the building, and was greatly bruised. His life was saved only by the fact that it was an open shaft, the clear space above the gear allowing the uninterrupted passage of his body. Every particle of clothing had been torn from his body,
and from many cuts blood flowed freely.

He was taken to his home at the corner of Elm and Main street, and Dr.
McInerney summoned.

The young man was resting comfortably last night, and if no complications set in it is thought that he will be around in a few days.

Hazen Wetmore, son of H. S. Wetmore, of 73 Spring street, was severely injured by being pulled out of a window in Fowler's ice factory yesterday.
Wetmore was standing at the window
and was pushed out by another boy, whom he says was Frank Culling. He fell twelve feet, struck a furnace door, and was badly bruised. Dr. Lewin attended him.

WARSHIP COMING.

H. M. S. Pallas Will Be Here November 9 to Celebrate King's Birthday.

The following letter was received by Deputy Mayor McGoldrick this morning.

"Government House, Fredericton,
Nov. 5th, 1903. I am in receipt of a communication from Vice-Admiral Douglas informing me that H. M. S.
Pallas will be in St. John harbor to help keep our Sovereign's birthday in a fitting manner.

"I sincerely regret that I will not be able to be in St. John on the above mentioned date, having accepted an invitation to be at Ottawa.

J. B. SNOWBALL,
Lieut.-Gov."

With reference to the above it may be noted that the last issue of the Royal Gazette contains a proclamation setting forth that the King deems it expedient that a later date than Nov. 9th
be fixed for the celebration of his birthday, and appointing the 24th of May next as that day. Nevertheless the usual salute will be fired from all military stations on Nov. 9th.

WIDOW'S REQUEST REFUSED.

HALIFAX, Nov. 5.—The will of the late C. C. Hamilton, of Shediac, was under consideration by the home mission committee of the Presbyterian church today and yesterday.

Under this will the Presbyterian church was made the residuary legatee of Mr.
Hamilton's estate, the amount involved being about $30,000, his widow having a life interest in the whole estate. Some time ago the widow contested the will and a compromise was effected by which the church accepted $10,000.
Later the widow asked for the return of the $10,000. A resolution was adopted today by the home mission, refusing the widow's request.

The young people of the Waterloo
street Free Baptist Christian Endeavor Society have arranged a special programme of music for this (Friday) evening.
