COLLECTION OF PLATE AT WINDSOR

Edward's Surpassed Only by Treasures of Czar

Earliest Piece an Elizabethan Rose-Water Dish of 1595—No Work of French Refugee Artists.

The King of Portugal, on his first visit to Windsor Castle, has seen a magnificent display of royal gold and silver plate, surpassed in quantity and value only by the historic collections of the Czars of Russia in the Kremlin at Moscow. In character and style it is in striking contrast to the Portuguese royal plate, which is almost entirely the handiwork of two noted French silversmiths of the eighteenth century, Francois Germain and his son, Francois Thomas Germain. But, just as it is not unreasonably but erroneously assumed that there must be old English plate of the time of Charles II. in the royal palaces of Portugal, which has been sent there as gifts to his future bride, Catherine of Braganza, so, too, the belief exists that a number of pieces of old Portuguese silver associated with Catherine's name, are preserved at Windsor Castle to this day. If such pieces ever existed, they have long since disappeared, and the only example of old Portuguese plate is of later date, and will be described below. At the Restoration there was no plate worthy of the name at Windsor, or at either of the royal palaces. The priceless treasure of gold and silver and jeweled ornaments, which in Tudor times was known throughout Europe as the most precious in existence, had been consigned to the melting pot by Charles I. and turned into coin, while the remainder shared a like fate at the hands of the Commonwealth.

Charles II. instantly proceeded to purchase plate from the royal goldsmith, Sir Robert Vyner, and, as is known from the inventory, his purchases were on a lavish scale. His presents of English plate—dishes and chalice, bottles and rosewater dishes, and ewers, to name only a few—to the Czar Alexis of Russia, which are fortunately still preserved in Moscow, testify to the splendor of his gift, while the sumptuous baptismal font and basin and the numerous "St. George's" salts in the Tower of London, as well as the grand sacramental vessels of the old Chapel Royal, Whitehall and St. James Palace, evidence of his large expenditure on plate.

EARLIEST PIECES DISPLAYED

The earliest pieces of English plate now displayed at Windsor are on the Elizabethan rosewater dish of 1595, and the companion Jacobean ewer of 1617, of the same form as a few years later realized at auction over £4,000 and have since passed into the great collection of "J. Pierpont" Morgan. A few years earlier than the dish is the "Celtic" nautilus cup—a superb example of German Renaissance work, by a noted Nuremberg craftsman, one Nicholas Schmidt, most of whose work is to be seen in the so-called "Green Vault" at Dresden. The authorship of the great Florentine artist was first claimed for this beautiful ornament by an English sculptor and designer of plate, John Flaxman, R. A.

The Windsor collection is rich in old German plate of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and comprises several large and massive rose-water dishes, a silver statuette of a cavalier on horseback of similar style and date to the one which is supposed to be the portrait of Charles I. now in the Kremlin; and two historical standing cups of considerable value. One is a prominent official of the University of Oxford, in recognition of his long services during the King's residence there in the Civil War. Old Dutch plate is represented by a few important examples, including a highly interesting rose-water dish and ewer, engraved with the arms and cypher of the ill-fated Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, and presumed to have been left in England upon her brief visit shortly after the Restoration of Charles II. The other Dutch pieces are an Amsterdam chalice and a charming porringer and cover. An imposing display is made of the large and valuable series of carved tankards and cups, elaborately mounted in precious metal, mostly of German origin, of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and also of the massive old silver tankards, English and foreign, several of which were royal gifts. Although no longer put to their original use, the unrivaled sets of old English silver sconces, wrought for William and Mary, are brought out on notable occasions such as the present visit of King Manuel.

CHICAGO OFFICIALS INDICTED FOR THEFT

Bunch Charged With Doing the City Out of $254,000

More Trouble in Nicaragua—Cook's Estimate to be Interviewed—Europe to Get Beef That America Relies.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Sten Drewson, of Copenhagen, who was the first newspaper man to greet Dr. Cook on his return to civilization, said here today that Captain Otto Sverdrup will make a trip to the north next summer in an endeavor to interview the two Eskimos who are said to have accompanied Cook. Mr. Drewson arrived here today by the Scandinavian Liner S. P. Tiden.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Paul Redleske, resigned deputy commissioner of public works, Michael H. McGovern, a wealthy contractor who has had many big city contracts, and nine city officials and employees of McGovern were indicted by the grand jury today. The men are charged with conspiracy to defraud the city out of $254,000 by laying only one sixth of the concrete and brick work called for in the contract for the construction of section N of the Lawrence Avenue tunnel.

BLUEFIELD, Jan. 27.—Private dispatches received here today state that the imprisonment of the members of prominent families in Granada and Managua still continues and that Madrid has virtually re-established a reign of terror. It is reported that General Chamorro with an army of two thousand after a fifteen days' march has reached La Libertad, where the outposts of the government forces are stationed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—A number of prominent friends of the insurgent movement in Nicaragua among them a brother of General Chamorro, have been thrown into prison according to advices received here today by Senator Cantrill, representative here of Nicaragua.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—That Europe must eat the beef which American refuses through its boycott is evidently the plan of the producers who are now crowding the foreign going vessels out of this port with cattle exports. One liner which left Boston today carried 372 head of cattle, 128 head more than she had booked to carry, while a second liner took 338 head, an excess of fifty head. A third liner leaving tomorrow carries 307 head. The port inspectors declare that fully 35 per cent. more cattle will be shipped in the next few weeks than was originally intended.

NO MAROT SPECIMENS

It is a curious fact that, with eighteenth-century English plate is represented by great and splendid pieces in almost bewildering number and variety, such as are to be found in no other collections in England, not a single specimen is to be seen of the work of the beautiful work wrought by the numerous French refugee silversmiths who fled to this country immediately after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. This is all the more remarkable since one of the chief designers of French plate, himself a refugee in Holland, accompanied William III. to England—namely, Daniel Marot. In this particular the English royal collection compares unfavorably with the Empress of Russia's extraordinary collection of old English plate. This deficiency can be attributed to a variety of causes, the chief of which was the lamentable and widespread custom in the eighteenth century of melting up old plate—which had in many cases been made only a few years previously—into new-fashioned things. All the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge have suffered severe losses in this way.

The Windsor plate of the eighteenth century is too extensive for detailed description here. Ewer, chalice and fruit dishes of great size, giant candelabra and table ornaments, soup tureens, and other decorative pieces may be seen in abundance. In the apartments occupied by King Manuel are the beautiful silver tables and mirrors presented to Charles II. and William III. by the City of London, which show the profoundest and the finest of English plate was influenced by seventeenth-century Dutch and early Louis XIV. designs.

GEORGE IV. AS A COLLECTOR.

The royal collection was very materially enlarged by an English sovereign of undoubted artistic tastes, George IV. He formed, as is well known, the priceless collection of Sevres porcelain and old French furniture dur-

BRITISH TORPEDO BOAT GOES ASHORE

Tax Collector Arrested for the Theft of $7,200

Russian Police Agent in New York Commanded—Steamer Makes Record Voyage.

DOVER, Jan. 27.—The British torpedo boat destroyer Eddie broke her moorings tonight during a gale in the channel and was driven ashore off this place. Tugs have gone to her assistance.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 27.—The big freighter Inverclyde came into port today, claiming a record for the longest voyage ever made without slowing down of engines. The Inverclyde steamed from Norfolk to Yokohama, around the Cape of Good Hope, a distance of 15,100 miles, without a slowdown of her engines, the trip taking 64 days. She carried 6,000 tons of coal for the government of Japan.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—In the list of "traitors, instigators and spies," published by Revolutionary Thought, the Paris organ of Russian discontent, three appeared in the copy received here, the name "Evaleuko" followed by this description:

"An old agent of the Russian police department in New York."

Immediately the cafes of the East Side buzzed with excitement.

"Butter!" This is his work was said everywhere for it is an open secret that the man unmasked as chief of the Black Hundred party to expose Russian spies in America, Evaleuko has been well befriended here for twenty years and has made it an especial point to meet incoming revolutionaries and supply them with funds.

"His life won't be worth much now," said an East Side Russian tonight. "A place in the revolutionary black list is unofficial sentence of death."

WELLESLEY, Mass., Jan. 27.—Clarence Daddman, aged 31 years, tax collector of the town of Wellesley, was arrested last night, charged with the embezzlement of the sum of $7,200 of the funds of the town. He was taken to the police station and locked up. The distribution of school terms, the Board of Selectmen, claims that Collector Daddman has confessed the embezzlement and that the thefts have extended over the past two years.

About seventeen children were present. After supper the little ones adjourned to the parlor, where the remainder of the evening was spent in games and amusements. During the evening Miss K. Beatty won a bottle of perfume as first prize in an annual spelling contest. The gathering broke up shortly after 11 o'clock. One of the guests present was Mrs. A. L. Colwell of Vancouver, a sister of Mrs. Cameron's, who has been away from St. John for nineteen years.

GO-PREACHERS HAVE A LIVELY TIME

Religion Under Difficulties in P. E. Island

How a Debating Society Took Precedence Over the Gospel of the Wanderers—Ike and Mr. Snaddon

CHARLOTTE TOWN, Jan. 28.—The Go-preachers still continue to furnish interesting items for the island papers. The latest reports state that they have gone to Bangor—not to Bangor, Me., but Bangor, P. E. Island. This is a section of the Church of Scotland, and the Go-preachers, who are holding forth there or with what success they are m-ting.

A meeting was held in the western part of the island, at Coleman, recently. It seems that Mr. Snaddon, the leader of the sect, had held meetings there a few months ago, making some converts. Last week he appeared again on the scene, announcing that a service would be held in the school house on a certain evening. A local enthusiast, an anti-Go-preacher, whose name was Ike, had arranged for another meeting in the same place on the same night, for the purpose, he said, of organizing a debating club. He declared that the Go-preachers would have to give way and "go."

Mr. Snaddon begged to differ, and in place of going, came to the meeting with his followers. A friend of Ike's led or by moving the appointment of Ike as chairman. He opened the meeting with an eloquent speech, in which he dwelt on the educational and helpful advantages of debating societies in general, and this one in particular. He presumed that if Mr. Snaddon was a gentleman he would retire. Mr. Snaddon, determined to hold the fort, began distributing hymn books, preparatory to beginning his service. This aroused the ire of the chairman. He commented on Mr. Snaddon's action in unparliamentary and non-Sunday school terms. The distribution of hymn books was suspended pro tem. It was suggested that the debating society be held in the school house, and that the Go-preachers be expelled from the island. Mr. Snaddon, however, was not to be deterred. He declared that he was a man of peace, and called upon his followers to follow him. This time, the debating society was up the rear.

TO EXTEND LINE TO GASPE COAST

Arrangements are now on and are likely to be completed shortly by which connections between St. John and points in Quebec will be afforded over the lines of the New Brunswick Telephone Company.

John Hall Kelly, M.P.P. for Bonaventure County, P.Q., and C. S. Carmichael, president of the Gaspe Telephone Company, both representing that company are in the city to confer with the N. B. Telephone Company as to the annexation of the Gaspe Company by the New Brunswick concern. H. P. Robinson met them yesterday at the Royal Hotel.

The extension of the line proposed will give the system 75 additional miles of line, reaching Paspébec and New Carlisle. New Brunswick wholesale firms deal quite largely along the Gaspe coast, and provincial lumber companies operate there to some extent, so that the extension will be appreciated by many.
