WEDDINGS

Woburn, Mass., Feb. 29—The trinitrotoluol building of the New England Chemical Company blew up with a terrific explosion early today. The trinitrotoluol stored in that section of the great chemical plant is said to be one of the most powerful explosives used in the manufacture of war munitions. The plant was located in a remote section of North Woburn, away from the residental quarter, but nineteen other buildings where heavy war orders were being filled were located nearby. Among these structures were those of the Merrimack Chemical Company. So great was the confusion immediately following the explosion that it was not known whether there was any loss of life.

ASHORE WITH COAL.

A telegram was recived yesterday afternoon by R. P. &W. F. Starr stating that the schooner Helen G. King, which has a cargo of coal for that firm from Perth Amboy, was aground at Cape Cod. No further details were obtained and it could not therefore be ascertained whether her condition is dangerous. The Helen G. King, which is 126 tons, was formerly one of the Stetson, Cutler & Company fleet, but was sold last year to outside interests. The schooner sailed from Perth Amboy on February 21 with about 260 tons of hard coal. Shipping people about the harbor infer from the tone of the telegram that the situation is not serious. It is believed probable that she ran on a shoal and that it would not be impossible to refloat her. Edward J. Boone.
