

CHAPTER V.

PAGE.

Age of Iron and Steam.—First Fan Blast. First Hot Blast. Steam Hammer. The Safety Foundry Ladle. Various improvements in Steamship Machinery. Scotland's share in Bessemer's process in making steel.

Chemistry.—Latent Heat. Radiant Heat. Specific Heat. Nitrogen Gas. Chloride of Lime. McIntosh Cloth. Carbonic Acid Gas. Artificial Stone.

Civil Engineering.—Almost all the great modern Canals, bridges and docks in Great Britain designed and constructed by Scotch civil engineers: Telford and Rennie. Blackfriars' Bridge by Milne. The Canadian Pacific Railway. The Sault Ste. Marie Canal, with locks first operated by electricity. The Great Eastern. . . 47—54

CHAPTER VI.

The Steam Engine.—What James Watt did to make it what it is. Various improvements by Watt. The Copying Press, Photography, &c.

The Locomotive Engine.—The first one in design and model.

Light.—Gas Light. The Drummond, Lime, or Calcium Light. The Heliostat. Biographic sketch of William Murdoch. 55—63

CHAPTER VII.

The Steamboat.—Various claimants. Scotland's share. Fulton a Scot. Clyde-built Ships. The Floating Graving Dock. The Screw Propellor. The Centre Board. The first Steamer to cross the Atlantic by steam power alone. The owners of the great Transatlantic Steamers. Scotch Engineers.

Steam Derrick and Steam Crane.

New York Elevated Railroads. 64—74

CHAPTER VIII.

Balloons, and first ascension in one. The Kite in Science.

The Bicycle and Tricycle, and Pneumatic Tire. Bicycle Skate. New Wheel.

Geology.—The Great Geologists of our day. Edinburgh the birth-place of Geology as a Science, and of Practical Chemistry. 75—84