The title, The One Volume Bible Commentary, arrests immediate attention, especially on the part of the every-day man, who cannot afford many books, nor the time to read them. A one volume commentary, provided it be well done, has the triple advantage of cheapness, compactness and convenience. Professor Dummelow's Commentary under the above title (The Macmillan Company of Canada, Toronto, 1092 large double column pages, along with 150 pages of special articles and seven maps; price $2.25 net), meets the conditions. The book is extremely well done. It is modern, whilst conservative and reverent. It is meaty, the paragraphs being well packed with illuminating information. The special articles, which, like the commentary itself, are written by the ablest present-day Biblical scholars, discuss a variety of important topics, including such as The Creation Story and Science, Heathen Religions Referred to in the Bible, The Messianic Hope, The Person, Life, and Teaching of Jesus Christ, Miracles, The Atonement, Inspiration, etc. Above all, the language is untechnical. The scholar speaks as a plain man with plain men. The commentary "has been specially written to meet the wants of the ordinary Bible reader." The Editor has been keeping this convenient volume at his elbow for reference. He has found that it does not fail him. Ministers will find it admirable, and there is no one recent book, so likely to be of such important service as this, to teachers and older scholars.

No more heroic man ever walked a deck than Wilfred T. Grenfell, the Missionary Hero of the Labrador Coast. He has had some very wonderful experiences in his twenty years of labor along the Coast, but none more wonderful than that which happened last year when he was caught with his dogs on a drifting piece of frozen snow being rapidly blown out to sea. How he spent the day and night on this "Ice-pan" in a temperature away below zero, and how he was miraculously rescued, is very graphically told in the little book just issued by William Briggs, Adrift on an Ice Pan (90c.). Very few men are ever called on to pass through such an experience as Dr. Grenfell. This book is so fascinating that if once taken up, it cannot be laid down. It contains an introductory biographical sketch by Clarence John Blake, and is nicely illustrated.

Rev. Charles Stelzle believes in publicity for churches and church work—not horn-blowing, but a straight-away, business-like making known of the church to its own community in such fashion that the people within the church will take a deeper interest in the various enterprises which it is undertaking, and the people outside be brought in. Mr. Stelzle believes in church advertising, and has himself had amazing success in it. His book, Principles of Successful Church Advertising (Fleming H. Revell Co., Toronto, 172 pages, illustrated, $1.25 net), is the result largely of first hand experience. It discusses the psychology, principles, construction
