The late Mr. J. M. Burke died lately in Manhattan in the 98th year of his age and by his death a provision made by him in his will, which was made in July, 1902, becomes operative. In his will Mr. Burke made provision for the establishment of a Home for Convalescents which was to be erected immediately after his death and the testator devoted the sum of $4,500,000 for that purpose. Mr. Burke was a communicant of the Church of the Incarnation.

On a recent Sunday two very beautiful additions to the interior of the church were dedicated—a pulpit, given by Colonel George Carwithen and his sons and daughters, in memory of his wife and their mother; and a lectern given by subscribers to replace a rather plain modern one. It was desired to specially emphasize two things in designing the pulpit; first, that it should be a memorial of one whose Christian name was Mary, and, secondly, that it should illustrate the Resurrection. With these objects in view, the design includes five figures—that in the central niche being of our Lord, the others being figures of the Three Marys and St. Peter, so expressly associated with the Resurrection. The pulpit, which is of oak, takes the place of a plain mahogany one, about eighty years old. The lectern is an oak eagle, which harmonizes with the pulpit, having an ornament of conventional vine running around the base.
