Mr. Tarte's Paper Warmly Compliments Mr. Borden -Campaign Will Succeed.

The Opposition Leader Has Gained Ground in All the Provinces, La Patrie Says.

Montreal, Oct. 11. - The arrange-Montreal, Oct. 11. — The arrangements for the reception of Mr. R. L. Borden, the leader of the Opposition, on his visit to Montreal are being taken up with enthusiasm by the Liberal-Conservatives of this city. It has been decided that a committee from Montreal will go to Brockville and escort Mr. Rorden on his coming to this city.

and escort Mr. Rorden on his coming to this city.

The Patrie, in a leading article to-night, apparently written by Mr. Tarte, referring to Mr. Boden's approaching visit to Montreal, says—"Mr. Borden has accomplished the work of a giant during the last four years, especially in the last four years. years, especially in the last twelve months. The campaign which Mr. months. The campaign which Mr. Borden is conducting will be crowned with success. The Parie, which makes it a duty not to commit any exaggeration, does not predict that Mr. Borden will carry it infallibly. An election is like a horse race—it is not won until the ballot-boxes are closed—but it is certain that the leader of the Opposition has gained a ground tool of recognition all that the leader of the Opposition has gained a great deal of ground in all the provinces. It is in the order of things that such should be the case. The Liberal party has already been two terms in office. Parties commence to die they day they arrive at power, Mr. Borden is stronghly protectionist. He is being reproached by the Government organs for using the words 'adequate protection.' The word 'adequate' signifies, if the interpretation intended is given to it, sufficient. It is a sufficient protection that Mr. Borden desires, and those who surround him desire the same."

The Patrie also expresses the hope that Mr. Borden will be given a cordial

The Provincial Secretary told him that if he would run he (Stratton) would pay everything else beyond his own personal expenses, On Lorne Hale's return to Pembroke he saw W. J. SHAVING THE BRIDEGROOM.

The shaving of the bridegroom on his wedding day is a Bulgarian custom which, handed down from pre-Christian days, is still observed with due formality, especially in country districts. While the barber is at his task a dancing crowd of young folks surrounds him and the bridegroom. surrounds him and the bridegroom. As the latter's hair is cut the snippings are carefully collected by some of the girls for preservation in one of the bride's chests. The barber, when his work is done, receives a small white linen cloth as a present and also a trifling sum of money from each person there. Then the bridegroom kisses the hands of the girls, washes his face and dons his wedding dress, which must first be carefully weighed three times by one of the boys.

The experience of this lady is that of thousands of others who have been assured that nothing short of an operation would rid them of this distressing complaint. On the face of it, it appears as if too many surgeons operate in order that they may keep their hand in, and lose no portion of their skill; then, again, too many surgeons are anxious to experiment (like the scientific man in Mark Twain's patletic story of the dog and her little puppy), and do not have proper regard for a patient's physicial welfare or condition.

UNIFORM RULES OF OPERATION.

Of All Canadian Railways Will Likely Be Adopted.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—At the meeting in Montreal last week of representa-tives of different Canadian railways a circular from the Railway Comm sion suggesting uniform rules for train operation on all Canadian roads, was considered and approved in principle. Draft regulations in detail after being considered by the dif-ferent roads will be submitted by another meeting of the railways in-terested and afterwards forwarded to the Commission for approval.

The uniform regulations suggested include the block systems of signals, automatic switches and other devices calculated to greatly minimize the liability of accidents.

Among other things suggested is that train hands shall not work more than a specific number of hours whether or not they are willing to. May Not Discrimate.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.-The Railway Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The Railway Commission yesterday morning handed out two more judgments affecting freight rates. The Grand Trunk had applied for permission to haul coal to certain Cobourg manufacturers at 80c. a ton, while charging other consumers 90c. The allegation was that the manufacturers needed the cut rate to continue business. The court decided against the application. Mr. Blair remarked that there had been decided against the application. Mr. Blair remarked that there had been no evidence that the manufacturers would be injured by the 90c. rate, but they had threatened to bring their coal by water unless the railway gave them the 80c. rate.

The Commissioners also decided that split peas be carried at the same rate as flour.

against his baby sister one month old, has led to the death of the latter at the hands of the boy. The tragedy occurred in the family of Nicholas Robinson, at Nyack, N. Y.

Since the little girl came a month ago the boy often exhibited jealous rage. When attempts were made to interest him in the little one, he frequently ran away crying, and once he upset the cradle.

Finally, he was left alone for a few minutes in the room where the baby lay asleep. The boy was playing with a small bronze statuette. Suddenly he cried to his mother — "Hurry, look at the baby." She ran into the room and fourd the statuette covered with blood. The baby's skull had been fractured and she was dead when the doctor arrived, At least six bruises were found on the head, all of which were struck before the mother was called. vere struck before the mother wa

"It was a remarkable instance of infantile crime. The boy evidently thought he had been supplanted in the affections of his parents. The latter deserve great sympathy, but I rendered the only verdict possible—that the baby was killed by her brother, whose tender age make him irresponsible for the deed."
When asked where his sister was, after the funeral, the boy replied—"Baby has gone away."

TAUGHT LADS

Kingston, Int., Oct. 11 .- At the po lice court this morning a case was unravelled which in more ways than unravelled which in more ways than one resembles the stories told by Dickens of schools for instilling criminal ideas into innocent young minds. The instructor in this case was Thos. O'Neill, who lived at 259 King street, and two lads between ten and twelve years of age were in the police court as witnesses against him.

The fact that O'Neill was engaged in such practice was discovered by the police last night, and the evidence against him was so strong that the against him was so strong that the magistrate sentenced him to spend six months in Central Prison.

A little lad named Patrick, in the course of his evidence, stated that O'Neill had instructed him how to pick pockets, and told him to keep his eyes open to see if he could not steal someone's pocketbook. Patrick said that O'Neill had told him of a young lad who had stolen a pocketbook for him containing $18.

THE CHARACTER OF HAMLET.

"The time is out of joint; O cursed spite, That ever 1 was born to set it right."

In these words. I imagine, is the key to Hamlet's whole procedure, and to me it is clear that Shakespeare sought to depict a great deed upon a sould unequal to the performance of it. In this point I find the piece composed throughout. Here is an oak tree planted in a costly vase which should have received into its bosom only lovely flowers; the roats bosom only lovely flowers; the roots spread out, the vase is shivered to

A beautiful pure and most moral nature, wintout the strength of nerve nature, without the strength of nerve which makes the hero, sinks beneath a burden which it can neither bear nor throw off; every duty is holy to him—not the impossible in itself, but the impossible to him. How he turns, agonizes advances and recoils, ever reminded, ever reminding himself, and at last almost loses his purpose from his thoughts, without ever again recovering his peace of mind. It pleases, it tlatters us greatly to see a hero who acts of himself, who loves and hates us as his heart prompts, undertaking and executing thrusting aside all hindrances and accomplishing a great purpose. Historians and poets would fain persuade us that so proud a lot may fall to us that so proud a lot may fall to man. In "Hamlet" we are taught otherwise; the hero has no plan, but the piece is full of plain, • • • Hamlet is endowed more properly with sentiment than with a characteristic state.

with sentiment than with a character; it is events alone that push him on, and accordingly the piece has somewhat the amplification of a novel. But as it is Fate that draws the plan, as the play proceeds from a deed of terror, and the hero is steadily driven on to a deed of terror, the work is tragic in its highest sense, and admits of no other than a tragic end.

WOOING UNDER OTHER SKIES

There are more ways of wooing than there are nations, and to most people many of them may well seem very strange indeed. The etiquette of love among the Hungarian gipsies, for instance, is as follows: Cakes are used as love-letters. A coin is baked into the cake, which at the first opportunity is flung to the favored object. The retention of this is looked upon as a virtual "acceptance;" its forcible return, an intimation that the "attentions" are undesired. This, of course, requires no eloquence on the lover's part. In some parts of the world, indeed, all that is demanded of a lover is physical force. Among the semi-savage tribes in the Arabian desert, round about Smai, the lover tries to seize the girl while she is pasturing her father's flocks. She pelts him with mud, sticks and stones, and will be held in lifelong repute if she succeeds in wounding There are more ways of wooing him. Once driven into her father's tent, the lover's object is attained, and the betrothal is proclaimed.

There is considerably more poetry in the method of the Yao Midos, one of the many Burmese-Tartar people, who woo their lives absolutely without words, but to the sound of music. On the first day of winter they have a great feast, at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree," each playing his favorite instrument. As the maiden he loves passes him the youth maiden he loves passes him the youth plays the louder and more feelingly. If the girl ignores him and passes on he knows that she will have none of him; if she steps up to him and lays a flower upon the instrument he jumps up, takes her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and they wander off.

A remarkable custom prevails among the Dyaks of Borneo. When one of them would woo the maiden of his heart he chivalrously helps her in the hardest portion of her daily toil. If she smiles upon him, no matter how sweetly, he does not immediately respond, but waits until the next dark night. Then he steals to her house and lightly wakens her, as she lies asleep beside her sleeping parents. The parents, if they approve, make no sign, but sleep onor pretend to. If the girl accepts she rises and takes from her lover the betel and sweetmeats he has brought her. That seals their betrothal, and he departs as he came, neither speaking nor being spoken to.
