ascertain the nature of the river bed. The report was entirely satisfactory, and a rocky bed with but little mud was found to extend across the river. The bridge would be about 2500 ft. long, requiring, say, thirteen piers of 200 feet span. Within a nate of the proposed site, lies the almost inexhaustible quarry of Bourdon where some of the best stone for the I. C. R. bridges was found. We await further developments with interest, knowing that a great measure of our future success as a town depends on the proper consideration of the question.

The arrival and loading of these different vessels has created a hope in the minds of our people that the old time scenes may be revived, when the harbour of Campbellton was at times filled with sea-going vessels. Certainly as lumbering privileges disappear in other parts of the province will our prospects in that line improve.
