And another cause is found in the fact that some of our lead ng citizens, men who from their social and commercial positions and influence in our community, should command and retain our respect, who are to a certain makers; and who, unhappily, have their finer feelings, nobler qualities, and their perceptions of right and wrong so blunted through the habitual use of intoxicating drinks, that they are lowered in their own respect, and ningly lost to any sense of shame in this matter; are, by daily frequenting and passing in and out of and drinking i the bar-rooms of the liquor dealers openly abetting and countenancing thes w breakers, and setting a deleterious and pernicious example to their fellow citizens in the lower ranks of society The consequent effect is that the liquor dealers and others inclined to violate the Scott Act, encouraged by the support of these gentlemen, are incited to disregard and defy the law. The "Advance" edi-torial says "that the Act has failed to accomplish anything in the way of temperance reform." But, by the adoption of that Act, society has placed itself on the right side by placing the sale of liquors under the ban of the law, and naking it an illegal and disreputable traffic, and by educating the people generally to separate from it that sense of respectability and legality as a traffic which it has so long enjoyed under the protection of the law, and lead them to And now that there are a Board of Commissioners and a Chief Inspector, specially charged with the duty of preventing the sale of intoxicating drinks in this County, and who are in the receipt of a remunerative salary therefor, does not the statement of the editor of the "Advance" that "evidence that intoxicating liquors they are concerned is, that the evil are sold is not wanting on the streets, and is a fact "apparent to everybody," bear rather heavily on the said Commis-sioners and Chief Inspector, and if said statement be true, is it not evidence "apparent to everybody" that these officers are not doing their duty in this matter; and in this respect, what has the "Advance" editor ever done to promote the enforcement of the Act. and and? Has he ever drawn attention to the violations of the law and borne testi-mony to the evils of the traffic, and called upon the officers to do their duty in this matter? Has he ever done anything towards the moral uplifting of the people of the community? Has he used the influence of his paper towards the promot-ing of the higher welfare and culture of his fellow citizens? Has he been known Moral Reform? Readers and friends of the "Advance" have admired a certain mode of meeting and disposing of political and newspaper opponents, but as a strength or influence for good in temperance and other moral matters he and his paper totally lack the symmethy and we have a support to the last moment in the inflatuation that the inflated prices of 1880 to that was deposited in the 'Casket,' also to Mrs. A.
