Forgotten.

"Not a drum was heard,
Not a funeral note,
As his corse to the station was hurried."

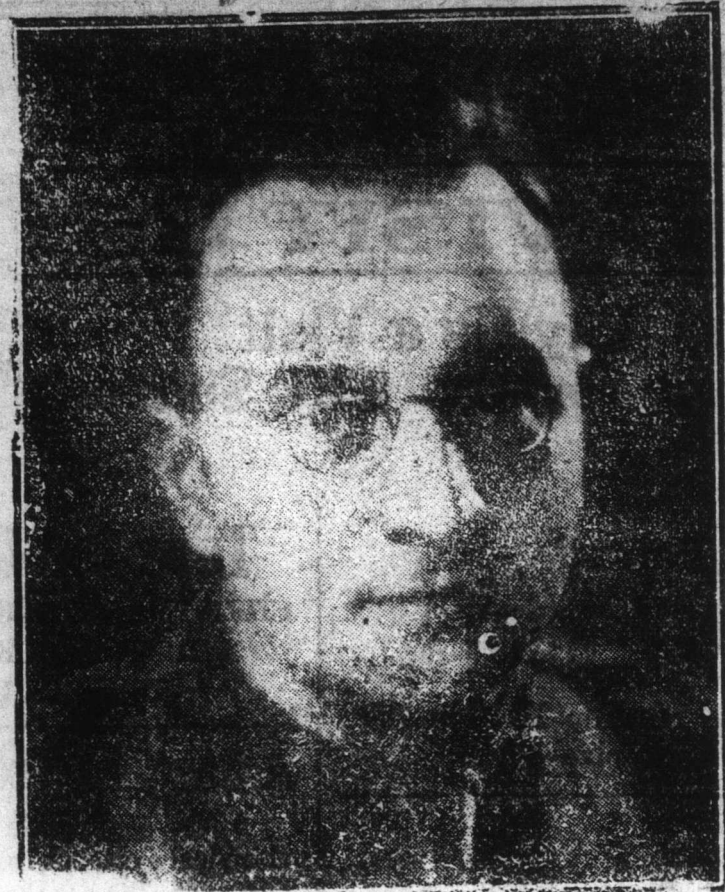

Yesterday morning the body of a SOLDIER who had passed away at the Jensen Camp was taken to the station for transportation to Placentia. The news item describing the cortege states that the remains were unaccompanied, other than by the undertaker who prepared, and confined the body for interment, and an assistant. And the corpse was that of a SOLDIER, one of the members of that gallant regiment which was publicly styled by a field officer of high rank "better than the best." Unattended by a corporal's guard, this young man, whose life was given (no less hesitatingly because he fell a victim to the white plague) in the great cause of liberty was not accorded the last tribute of his regiment's respect, and save for those who felt it their duty to escort the hearse to the railway station there was no evidence of either sympathy or regard shown the deceased.

Not even given a soldier's funeral escort. Not as much as a guard of honor composed of his platoon mates. No ruffling of drums, no note of bugle, no firing squad with arms reversed. None of the military pomp and circumstance of former days. Whose was the fault, whose the neglect? People are asking these questions to-day and wondering the reason why the respect due to the soldierly dead was not manifested as on other occasions. The people of Placentia will want to know, the people of the district will want to know, and the people of the Dominion will also want to know, just who was responsible for the negligence or deliberate omission of the last military honors due a deceased soldier. Someone has blundered and seriously, and an explanation is due from the military authorities. The Royal Newfoundland Regiment is still in active service. Its rank and file are entitled to exactly the same honors, whether at home or abroad, as distinguished soldiers, who are on the regimental strength. The non-commissioned officer referred to was obviously on the strength, and the lack of respect shown his dead body is not either in keeping with the traditions or customs of the British Army. The man gave all that he had—his life. It matters not that he died in hospital. He was a SOLDIER, one of those for whom it was said so often, "Nothing is too good."

Can it be that how this is forgotten? Anyway the facts are plain and those who witnessed the little procession yesterday morning slowly wending its way to the railway station, have the testimony of their eyes that the body of one of our soldiers of the King went on its way to its last resting place unescorted and unguarded by comrades. There can be no excuse for the neglect. Military honors were due the deceased soldier, but they were not accorded. What do the soldiers in barracks think of it? If they think at all they will know what to expect when the call comes for the next. There was a great deal of invidious distinction made in the past, but we had thought that the day of this had gone by. Evidently it has not. Yesterday morning's "military funeral" proves that it is still there. Just this reminder to those responsible. After the day of peace there will be a price to pay. The soldiers will remember and if there should be a shattering of high seats, the holders will know the reason therefor. Here is what Kipling said about it years ago, and the sentiment of the verse is as true to-day as it was when written:

"For its Tommy this, an' Tommy that,
an' 'Chuck' Ruddy, the brute,
But its 'Saviour of our country' when
the guns begin to shoot:
An' its Tommy this, an' Tommy that,
an' anything you please;
But Tommy ain't a bloomin' fool—
you bet that Tommy sees."

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.—The Xmas closing exercises were held at Littlefield College yesterday afternoon. Some of the pupils performed an operetta very nicely after which His Grace Archbishop Roche presented the prizes. His Excellency and staff were present.

MR. F. A. MCKENZIE WHO LECTURED LAST NIGHT.

Prize Giving.

The prize-giving of the Colonial and Continental Model School was held in the Synod Hall last night. Dr. W. W. Blackall occupied the chair, the Rev. J. Brinton was present, and Miss Purchase, Lady Vice-Principal presided at the piano. The first half of the programme consisted of solos, duets, action songs, recitations and dances, all of which were excellently executed and evidenced the thorough mental and physical training that the school gives its pupils. Whilst all the performers were good, special mention should be made of little Doris Butler and Ruby Matthews, who were the "stars" of the entertainment. There followed a short address by Dr. Blackall, who spoke of the importance of a good and proper education, an education that will enable Newfoundland to hold her own with countries that are more fortunate in their educational facilities. The events of the last few years have testified to the wisdom of the English educational system. After congratulating the lady vice-principal on her recovery from a very serious illness, the staff on the result of their labors, the children on their excellent showing, and all on the outcome of the great world war, Dr. Blackall distributed the prizes to the fortunate winners, saying a few words of congratulation and encouragement to each. At the close of the distribution, Dr. Blackall announced his gift of a scholarship of $25.00 yearly, and continuously, to the boy or girl who gains the highest marks in the C.E.E. examinations, the scholarship being a tribute to the memory of the doctor's son, who died in defence of his king and country. The Rev. J. Brinton then gave a short address in support of Dr. Blackall's congratulations, and the proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem. The prize list is as follows:

Good Work.

Yesterday afternoon the ladies of the Khaki Guild held their sale in aid of the fund for Disabled Sailors and Soldiers. The sale was opened by Miss Herder who sang "Rule Britannia" in a very excellent manner. The sales were brisk and the merriment especially did some rapid work. The concert given by Mesdames Dickie, Warren and J. C. Baird, and Misses Keegan, Herder and Mitchell was applauded and liked by all present. Mrs. Dickie and Mrs. Baird acting as accompanists during the same. After the sale the committee was entertained by the Hon. President, Mrs. A. W. Harvey.

Congratulations are due to the President and all the ladies who conducted the sale in such a successful way, and the proceeds of $500 are an indication that their hopes of realising $10,000 during the coming year may become an actuality.

Cranford of this city took for his bride Miss Lucy Parsons of Brockton, Saturday evening, the ceremony being at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Stewart, 103 Prospect avenue. Both came from Newfoundland, the bride's parents being Mr. and Mrs. John Parsons, and the bride has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Stewart for several years. Among the guests were a number of Newfoundland friends. Rev. Jas. Holmes, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who spent two years at Seldom-Come-By, Nfld., and is known to the couple's friends, performed the ceremony. The bride was prettily gowned in white crepe de chene and her veil was caught with orange blossoms. Mr. and Mrs. Stewart served refreshments. The groom returned to Camp Upton, N.Y., Sunday—Ex.

Items of Interest.

Fighting efficiency of the American navy at night will be increased about twenty-five per cent. by the perfection of a star shell, operating at long range under all conditions at sea. The new shell is said to excel any produced by other nations. The history of its development is described in a statement recently by the Navy Department. The shell is said to be suitable for firing from guns of from three to five inch calibre, and is fitted with a parachute attachment. It is filled with illuminating matter guaranteed to burn in spite of the terrific rush of air it meets when fired. The value of the shell, said the Navy Department's statement, lies in illuminating the naval units of the enemy without disclosing the position of the craft using the shell.
