Precedence--Who Goes First?

Precedence—Who Goes First?

The Milton Champion thus discourseth on the absurd "precedence programme" sent out from England to tell green colonials how to walk in processions, enter ball rooms, sit at public dinners, etc: "If is doubtless a matter of supreme indifference to the vast majority of Canadians, (who haven't "blue blood" coursing throtheir unaristocratic veins, and who may be ranked with that class of humanity yelept "pussons,") whether or not this table of precedence had ever been laid down or approved by Her Majesty. While we have all the advantages arising from a monarchical form of Government, our constitution is essentially democratic, and the will of the people, from whom all power ultimately springs, is powerful in directing our public men in the discharge of their duties. The repeated and arduous labors of Reformers have severed the unholy alliance between the Church and State; our Universities and public Institutions are no longer closed to all but a favored class, and belief in a particular creed is not essential to advancement in public life. Is there then any reason why the hierarchy of one church should take precedence of another, in the D minion of Canada;

If not, why should the Archbishops public life. Is there then any reason why the hierarchy of one church should take precedence of another, in the D minion of Canada.

If not, why should the Archbishops and Bishops be numbered seventh in order, before those who are engaged in making and administering the laws or defending the State from our enemies.—Have the Presbyterian bodies no Moderators of the Synods, or the Methodists no President of the Conference, or other denominations no chief officers entitled by their learning, social rank and purity of life to associate with their Lordships, the Archbishops and Bishops? Does the fact of their not belonging to the Church preclude them from occupying as high place in the Synagogue as their more favored brethren? Although the giving of precedence to one class of ecclesiastics, and ignoring all others, may, per se, be a small thing, the principal is one against which we must protest, as an unjustificable preference and an insult to a large class of her Majesty's loyal subjects. The Archbishops and Bishops have no legal standing in the State, and the fact of their not being ranked in a class higher than others, while they have no official connection with the Government, shows that those who advised the Queen in making such a table, either disregarded the teachings of the past, or were pandering to the Roman Catholic and English Churches while ignoring the rights and feelings of other denominations equally entitled to consideration and respect.

Tempting his FATE.—Lately a seaman named John Brown, belonging to Her Majesy's ship Duke of Wellington, met with a frightful accident at Wombwell's menagerie, which is at present exhibiting at Portsmouth, through an act of fool-hardiness. He was in company with several of his shipmates, and by way of bravado said he would show them that he was not afraid of lions. He accordingly thurst his right hand through the bars of the lions' cage, when one of the animals sprang forward and seized it in its mouth. The agonized cries of the unfortunate man created a most painful excitement in the menagerie, and it was not until the keepers had beaten the brute off with an iron bar that the hand was released. The back of the hand and the wrist were most horribly lacerated, the fiesh having literally been torn off. As soon as he was extricated from the painful position, Brown fainted away.
