—A Brave Girl.

The comedy-drama in four acts, "A Brave Girl," was presented at the Grand Opera House last night by the Josie Mills Company. The piece is not well known here, but is nevertheless an attractive one, and was well presented. The acting of John E. Atkinson as the loquacious Vasco De Gama Biles was very good, and he won many encomiums. Frank Sheldon made up admirably and took the exacting part of Little Bubbles with a grace and freshness of method. Josie Mills acceptably characterized Mulvinia Sophia Hoskins, an uneducated, though true-hearted girl. The remainder of the parts were well sustained. To-night Josie Mills will present a sensational play, "Wrecked" will be produced for the first time here. The company remain the balance of the week, and will give a Saturday matinee. The performances are deserving of good patronage and for the quality the prices are unusually low.

Following McIntyre's Example.

On Tuesday night the wooden breakwater at the south end of Victoria bridge had a greater burden imposed upon it than it could bear, and it is now in imminent danger of falling into the river. Attempts have been made for some time past to buttress the breakwater on the south side of Queen street and to retain the foundation on which it was established. But the big rainfall of the week has done much to increase the weight of water in the river, and it is a serious inroad through the defective wooden breakwater and sapped its foundations. The rainfall of the last few days added to the trouble, and with a creek the sidewalk and tons of earth were carried over on the breakwater. A little bigger volume of water in the river and the whole mass will be carried down stream as far over as the street railway track, and for some time longer transfers will have to be made at the south end of Victoria bridge. Nothing short of a strong wall of masonry will meet the require-
