ADVERSELY REPORTED UPON.

Yet Maurice Baldwin's Account Was Ordered Paid,

Transient Traders' Fees to be E ised from $10 to $50 Per Day-City Jewellers Kick-License Fees Collected.

No. 3 committee, at its regular meeting in the City Hall last night, did a somewhat unusual thing, which, however, may be knocked in the head by the council. During the progress of the Western Fair, Contractor Maurice Baldwin was ordered to water King street, from William to Ontario, and Ontario, from King to Dundas. He subsequently sent in a bill for six days watering at $3 per day, but the account was referred to the inspector. Mr. Isaacs, for a report. The report was presented last night, and it was to the effect that the watering had been performed only on four days. Notwithstanding this, the committee decided to pay the account. In future transient traders will make themselves scarce around London. The grocers were the first to complain of the loss they sustained though the operations of these traders; now the jewelers object to men coming to the city during Fair week and Christmas time, and selling trash jewelry, thereby causing heavy losses to established jewelers. With the object of remedying the evil, the committee will recommend that all transient traders be taxed $50 a day, instead of $10 as heretofore. J. K. McLeod's application to erect a board roof on some coal bins at the corner of Clarence street and the Grand Trunk, was granted, Alex. McRae will be paid $10 for damages sustained to his hack in a collision with the South London fire wagon on July 12. McRae claimed the firemen were responsible for the accident.

License Inspector Bell reported $1,894 of fees collected to date, an increase of $126 compared with the same period last year. Mayor Little's message to the council (re the watering by the railway company of all streets on which tracks are laid), was left over till next meeting. Manager Carr may then have a proposition to make to the city.

An account from the London Electric Company for $25 for lighting Queen's Park on the evening of Civic Holiday was ordered to be paid if the teamsters had not already settled it. The account has been before the committee for some time. owing to a slight misunderstanding. When the use of the park was granted No. 3 committee understood the matter of lighting was referred to them with power, and the lamps were ordered to be lighted. It tuned out, however, that such action was illegal, and that the aldermen on the committee were responsible for the sum. It is understood the teamsters have paid the account.

The brown team on the hook and ladder truck at No. 1 station will have to be replaced by heavier horses when the new Preston truck arrives. The department's veterinary will be instructed to watch for a serviceable team and report. The fire limits bylaw will be submit-will was dated four days earlier. In that for explanations sent in by women and will the estate was estimated to amount to girls. All may read; but only women $9 000 exclusive of insurance policies and girls may guess—and win the $9 000 exclusive of insurance policies equivalent to $6,000. The latter were left prizes. to Miss Ella Brady. Out of the former $3,000 was ordered to be distributed among certain charities named. The reverend father, besides this will, left a letter of instructions to the executors requesting them t) give his sisters $2,000 of the residue after paying the amounts mentioned to the various charities.

When the executors came to value the estate outside of the $6,000 policies willed to Miss Brady they discovered that, owing to bad debts amounting to a large sum, there was not sufficient left to carry out deceased's instructions contained in the letter.

The Misses Molphy then brought the case into court, alleging that the will was later than 6 o'clock p.m., Nov. 12. For invalid owing to the fact that Father Molphy was mentally incompetent at the time it was drawn up.

An amicable settlement was made in court without the assistance of the judge. S. H. Blake, Q.C., last night announced that Miss Brady being desirious of seeing the wishes of Father Molphy carried out, would refund the executors $500 of the $6,000 left to her, although not legally bound to do so. This offer was accepted by the plaintiff and Miss Brady dropped out of don, Ont.
