A Hidden Treasure.

While excavating near the Adelaide street crossing of the C. P. R. on Saturday evening Mr. James Lightheart came across a handkerchief, which had almost rotted away. Mr. Lightheart at once reported his find to Detective Rider. No doubt it was stolen property and had been buried by the thief who had not since returned. In fact the police believed him indentical with a certain suspicious person who was in these parts about a year ago. The jewelry consists of a silver locket and chain, a broken ring with a ruby and pearl settings, a pair each of gold and jet bracelets, a lairpin with projecting gold alls, a small locket inscribed with the word 'Ida' and containing the miniature photo of a young woman; besides other trinkets.

Physicians': Prescriptions The Clouds Roll By

Third Day-Monday. Societies day at the Fair! And a grea success it was.

This is the first truly great day of the exhibition and it was ushered in by an im-posing demonstration of the various benevolent and fraternal orders of the city, who responded for the second time to the invitation of the Fair Board.

The weather in the morning was threst-ening, but about noon the clouds rolled by and the sun came out bright and clear, to ening, but about noon the cloude rolled by and the sun came out bright and clear, to the gratification of everybody in general and the Fair directors in particular. Incoming trains brought hundreds of visitors to the city, and the streets have now assumed a genuine Fair appearance.

Shortly before 1 p.m., society members flocked to their respective halfs, secured their regalia and wonded their way to the Market Square, where the procession was to organize. Each order had its position in the column previously allotted so that there was no clashing of arrangements. Getting such a large body into order was no easy thing, however, and the marshals had their hands full. It was close to 1:30 p.m. before everything was in readiness. The route lay along King street to Ridout, thence north to Duadas, thence east to the park. Thousands lined the sidewalks on Dundas street. The procession was a big one in point of numbers, and took over 20 minutes to pass a given point. Those in the van were beyond Adelaide street, near the Fair Grounds, while the rear end was at the corner of Richmond and Dundas. Moreover, it was thoroughly representative in character, and the seek day despite business exigencies usually attendant upon Fair week, speaks volumes for the strength and enthusiasm of society organization in the city.
