He did so, and became intoxicated and went to bed in that condition. In the morning when he awake he was suck, and his lin-in was stained with claret, having the appearance of blood. His father, seeing the discoloration, called a priest and doctor, thinking his son had burst a blood-result. That's how the story got around."

the Kingston Whig makes a very good point in the following: "Those gentlemen who arranged the lacrosse trip to Europe committed an almost unpardonably foolish act in allowing any Indians to be placed upon the team, and as they claimed to be actuated by purely patriotic motives we are at a loss to understend how they so far forgot themselves. Surely Canadians ought to do all m their power to correct the mistaken views which foreigners too often hold in regard to us, instead of lending some tings of coler to their absurd ideas by sending to Eugland as representatives of Canada and her national game a lot of 'red men. 'Could net Dr. Beers have found twenty sufficiently good players without going to Caughnawaga after them? and if not, wouldn't it have been better to give up the project altogether? Hundreds of emigration ps mphlets and railway land advertisements will not begin to counteract the but effect of this ill-timed trip. It may entirely undo some of the good that has been done of late years, and for a long time we expect to see the English papers using 'Canadian' and 'Indians' as synonymous terms."
