HOW YOUR COLLARS ARE POLISHED.

The World Gets a Glimpse at the In- wardness of One of Toronto's Big Laundries—The Oriental, King-street West.

The manner in which modern inventions in machinery have lifted the load of labor off the back of man is better illustrated by nothing than a trip through a first-class steam laundry. There the visitor will see how what was formerly the work of thousands is done by a few score, without the heat and discomfort of a kitchen, and withal much better done. The laundry business is of comparatively recent develop- ment, but the modern public are quick to recognize merit, and the excellence of the workmanship is such that the business of laundries in general, and of the establishment The World had the pleasure of investigating in particular, is continually and rapidly on the increase. In fact it has come to this, that a man would as soon have his mother cut his hair as get his laundry done at home.

It was to note the progress of this novel and already almost perfected business that The World Young Man, hearing that the Oriental 239 King-street west, was the best equipped in town, called the other day on the manager to see what was to be seen. That gentleman kind- ly offered to show the reporter through his establishment. The course of goods was traced through the whole process of laun- drying, from the tables on which the col- lectors of the Oriental deposit the bundles of soiled goods to the long stands on which lie the little heaps of spotless and shining linen, ready for parceling and delivery.

The Oriental laundry, it may be first re- marked, occupies a whole building of three stories and a basement. The front of the ground floor is utilized as a large and well- lighted office. High ceilings and brightly- tinted walls give a cheerful appearance to the whole interior, while the health of the operators is ensured by the best of ventila- tion. The manager explained that the ut- most care is taken of the young ladies and that they in turn give the greatest satis- faction. Only first-class hands are em- ployed. Kindness is bound to pay, in addi- tion to being its own reward, and an ex- cellent feeling exists between the girls and their employers.

The drivers of the Oriental, of whom there are four, deposit the bundles collected in their rounds on a certain table. From thence they are taken one by one to a second table, where they are opened, counted and marked. The strictest rules are enforced against hand- ling more than one bundle at a time in this part of the process. Thus there is no reason- able possibility of mixing the goods of differ- ent customers. When the identity of each article has thus been fixed the scene changes to the top flat, where four large washers roll to and fro. Through these the goods are sent and come out thoroughly cleansed. The process is by no means drastic, and certainly did not seem to the reporter to be half so destructive as the ordinary hand- board washing. After washing the articles are subjected to other processes. Those which do not require starching are im- mediately dried and ironed. Ironing of starched clothes is an elaborate process, and it is herein the art of the laundryman is seen at its highest development. After starching the clothes are hung in the drying room. This room calls for special notice. It is heated from the 50 h. p. boiler in the base- ment to a heat of 200 degrees. It is so arranged that in order to insert or remove goods it is not necessary to enter it. Long stands fitted with rods run in and out on rollers, and these when drawn out in the cool air are loaded and are again withdrawn in half an hour, when the goods are dry. A special room of lower temperature is employed for flannels. These require great care to prevent harden- ing in the drying process. In washing flan- nels especially, but also with all kinds of articles, only the purest and costliest wash- ing soap is used. No chemicals whatever are employed, as it has been found by experi- ence that they deteriorate the goods and prematurely destroy them. The shirt-front ironer is a machine of ingenious construc- tion. The polishing is not done as the ladies do it by hand, that is by rubbing, but under a re- volving cylinder the shirt front is run sev- eral times, till it shines like glass. The cylinder is heated in a curious manner. It is of hollow steel, and through it extends a gas- rod punctured in many places. From these holes little gas jets spurt out which keep the moving cylinder at the desired heat. The cuff and collar ironer is the largest in Can- ada. It will accommodate four operators and has a capacity of 800 dozen per day. The largest mangle in the laundry is a gigan tic affair which will take the widest sheet or table-cloth without folding. To ensure per- fect cleanliness the building is washed once a week throughout. To the reporter every- thing looked as neat and trim as the deck of a man-of-war. In addition to the weekly cleansing, stoves and furnaces are entirely excluded. The flat-irons are heated on small patent gas stoves, of which the gas is mixed with air to secure a blue flame, which is found to be best for heating. The steam wringer is a circular copper tub, the sides of which are perforated my many small holes. When filled with clothes the wringer is made to revolve at a rate of 500 revolutions per min- ute. The clothes are thus by centrifugal force pressed against the sides and the wa- escapes through the small holes therein. In this way 60 shirts can be wrung more thor- oughly and with less damage in three minutes than would be possible by hand labor in an hour. Another machine which would gladden the hearts of the ladies is the steam damper which takes the place of hand sprinkling. It consists of two cloth- covered revolving cylinders which meet like the rubber cylinders of a hand wringer. Beneath the under cylinder is a trough of water, through which the cylinder turns. From this trough water is absorbed by the cloth covering and passed on to the upper cylinder. When both cylinders are thus properly wet the articles to be dampened are quickly run between them and the result de- sired is accomplished. It would be quite impossible in a short space to describe all the interesting features of this admirable in- stitution. It is thoroughly equipped and efficiently managed. Small mending is done free where required, when considerable labor is expended the charge is only cost. Collec- tions are made in any part of the city. In an emergency goods can be delivered within six hours after receipt. The work turned out cannot be surpassed. In fact, no stone is left unturned to please the patrons of the Oriental. As evidence of the satisfaction given, the manager told The World there has not been a week since the business was opened in which receipts have not been larger than those of the week previous.

The Mouse Ran Up His Sleeve.

As George Humphreyville was seated in a car going to Lancaster a few days ago a mouse sprang from the back of a seat in front of him and landed beneath the collar of his coat. In a twinkling the rodent was in the sleeve of Mr. Humphreyville's coat, and then there was considerable com- motion in the car. The mouse was finally expelled from the understairs hiding-place, but none too soon for the peace of mind of his victim.

Disease Germs in the Market Basket.

In a paper which he read before the Berks County Medical Society, Dr. Beaver ad- vances a new theory as to the spread of ty- phoid. He has been in correspondence with every physician in the county and with prominent doctors of the country, and with the aid of statistics thus gathered he showed that typhoid is twice as prevalent in rural districts as in cities, and his theory is that the germs of the fever are transmitted by means of vegetable products brought from the country districts.

Health in Herbs.

Health-giving herbs, barks, roots and berries are carefully combined in Burdock Blood Bitters, which regulate the secretions, purify the blood and renovate and strengthen the entire system. Price $1 a bottle, six for $5. Less than one cent a dose.

Theatrical Note.

Little Johnny: "I say, pa, what does a 'star' mean?"

Pa (who is an actor and has starred): "It is an abbreviation of starvation, my son."

Winter Sports.

The gay winter season exposes many to attacks of colds, coughs, hoarseness, tightness of the chest, asthma, bronchitis, etc., which require a reliable remedy like Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam for their relief and cure. Known as reliable for over 30 years. The best cough cure.

Holloway's Corn Cure destroys all kinds of corns and warts, root and branch. Who then would endure them with such a cheap and effec- tual remedy within reach?
