This brought it within the scope of the Michigan law to which he had referred, and ability to pay was therefore established. Furthermore, it was connected at either end with roads having a two-cent rate, and therefore occupied an exceptional position. With such a road the experiment of a lower passenger fare might well be made, and if it worked satisfactorily it might afterwards be extended to other roads in the older parts of the province, and probably, in course of time, to those in what was now known as New Ontario.

Mr. Preston asserted that it was not going too far to say that our railgoing too far to say that our railroads, which had been liberally suosidized, should pay as much taxation as the railroads across the line, due allowance being made for any difference in conditions: He pointed to the State of Wisconsin, which, during the Granger movement, passed a law imposing ouerous control of rates, the reduction in charges causing a reduction in profits and the argesting of railway uevelopment, and the very interests development, and the very interests which were most clamorous for the which were most clamorous for the law in 1874 were the most clamorous for its repeal in 1876. Mr. Preston showed that from 1874 to 1903, 897 roads of 112,376 miles in the United States were sold under foreclosure, and according to Mr. McMurchy before the mi nicipal taxation committee, there is hardly a railway in Ontario that is to-day paying a dollar to its original investors. The railway companies of Ontario are paying $300,000 in municipal taxation and $35,000 to the province at $5 a mile, but the following persons have died of neglect. figures were quoted showing the tax per mile imposed by many of the states of the union: Alabama, $187; Arkan-sas, $171; California, $247; Colorado, French minister of public instruction $268; Connecticut, $1005; Delaware, has just sent around a circular putting $301; Florida, $132; Georgia, $120; Ida-a stop to an ancient usage in the ho, $244; Illinois, $411; Indiana, $477; lyceums, the offering by pupils at the Iowa, $171; Kansas, $251; Kentucky, end of the term of some gift to their $296; Louisiana, $247; Maine, $138; teacher.
