A SEASONABLE SERMON

Rev. C. W. Townsend Preaches on "What Are The Wild Waves Saying?"

The Rev. C. W. Townsend preached last evening to a large congregation on "What Are The Wild Waves Saying?" In view of the opening of the winter port this week, his discourse was deemed especially appropriate. In introducing it, he said the wild waves said different things to different persons. Nature responded to the moods of man, and like a phonograph, spoke out what man had spoken in. To the lover the waves said some sweet, soft, sentimental things. To the poet they had wonders to tell. They had uttered strange things to the seaman, and he had sought to interpret these things on the canvas, as Turner in his marvellous painting of "The Slave Ship." To the sailor the waves brought back, to memory the thought of places he had visited, and stirred him with an ambition to set out on new jaourneys. To the merchant the waves told of ventures afloat; sometimes they brought welcome tidings of gain, and at other times sadly tragic tales of loss. To the advertising quack they even spoke in his own vulgarizing speech. Once on all the bathing-houses round the coast of England this question was painted, and the answer given in bold, arresting letters: "Take Beecham's Pill." No wonder the waves get wild; and were angry at such desecration. To the widow and orphan of the drowned sailor the waves spoke in pathetic and breaking hearts. Here the preacher recited Tennyson's poem to the sea, "Break, break, break on the cold grey stones, O sea!" To the tired worker and contrivance invalid the wave spoke of rest and recuperation. They spoke to the men of God, Isaac Watts, standing at Southampton, looked across the silver waters of the Solent to the flowery meads of the Isle of Wight and wrote his famous hymn. "There is a land of pure delight," etc.

THE WAVES SPEAK OF GOD.

"The voice of the great Creator dwells in that mighty tone." They tell of His power, His glory, His skill and His goodness. They proclaim His providential government of the world. We sing, "Blessed are they that have heard the waves." The man said he wished she would rule them straight. It is not Britanna, but Jehovah that rules the waves. His way is in the sea and His footsteps in the great waters. The waves remind us of those that go down to the sea in ships. What thousands there are afloat. What a debt we owe them for bringing conveniences and comforts to us and for protecting our country. Let us remember the dangers to which they are exposed, and pray for those in peril on the sea. Let us give thought to the fact that they are debarr'd from many privileges we enjoy; and to have more consideration for them. Here the preacher put in a strong plea for the sailor.

The waves spoke of the spread of the Gospel. Jesus loved the sea. His first followers were fishermen. Let us remember the dangers to which they are exposed, and pray for those in peril on the sea. Let us give thought to the fact that they are debarr'd from many privileges we enjoy; and to have more consideration for them. Here the preacher put in a strong plea for the sailor.

The waves said to us, "This is not your rest." They told of storm, agitation, separation and sorrow. The waves are telling of the time when the sea shall give up the dead that are in it, and there shall be no more sea.

PROBATE COURT

Estate of George P. Simonsen, late of the city of St. John, trader. Petition of administratrix Mrs. Frances A. Williams, of the parish of Wilmot, Carleton county, widow, sister of deceased. Other next of kin have renounced in her favor. Administration granted. No real estate. Personal $250. E. T. C. Knowles, proctor.

Estate of James M. Johnson, hatter. The deceased died in 1891, appointing two executors, one of whom was his wife. The widow died. No inventory was filed and no account. Some of the legacies were not paid. One of the unpaid specific legacies twice applied in writing to the surviving executor for information, to which no reply was made, and no information given or inventory filed. Citation therefor an inventory was this day filed, but there being no satisfactory explanation of the failure on the part of the executor to previously file the inventory and to give information to the person entitled thereto, the costs of the application are ordered to be paid by the executor personally and not out of the estate. Bowser S. Smith, proctor for petitioner; C. N. Skinner, proctor for executor.

Before the court adjourned Judge Armstrong stated that there are nearly 250 estates in which probate or administration has been granted within the past three years in which no inventories have been filed. As the act throws the duty upon the judge of the probate court to see that these inventories are filed, notices are now being issued to the representatives of such estates calling for the required inventories to be filed. Wherever persons so notified neglect to so file their inventories unless for some very good cause is shown the costs will be made payable by the defaulting individual and not out of the estate.

Blair Neal the new organist of the Mission Church of St. John Baptist, Paradise Row, presided at the organ Sunday and made a very favorable impression. He comes from Chatham well recommended and takes the place of Mr. Parks who recently went to New York.

"SATIN MIGNON" ---Very Popular UNCOMMONLY SOFT AND LUXURIOUS The Ruling Fabric For Evening Gowns "SATIN MIGNON" is a material that Paris and London, as well as the large American and German style centres have welcomed with enthusiasm. The particularly soft, pliant and brilliantly lustrous characteristic of the new satin commend it highly for the new voguish Directoire gown, or for other apparel worn at evening functions. Its exceptional sheen and shimmer, which so beautifully display soft evening tints, place it in an entirely new class—something unquestionably unique.
