AUTUMN.

Antumn with its matchless treasur Cometh unto Christian hearts With a joyinl, pure, fration, Which no other time imparis; Cometh in its golden harvest, In its fruit so rich and fair. In its frait so rich and comfort Bursting freshly from its air.

Now the forest meet the eye.
And the early frost of autumn
Tomeheir lightly, possing by;
As the north wind with a pencil
Taken from the glorious skies.
Fainting on the meuntain leaflet
These unrivalled rambow dies.

These introduce cannot describe the yellow creeted Autumn With its fields of waving grain.
And the reapers with their sickles. They are gathering again—
Both the sower and the reaper Now uplift i thankful voice;
Man in tears so often soweth,
But in resping all rejoice.

Here is Automn's Indian Summer,

These who in bright faith enduring, Who in Antumn's mellow hour. Nobly meeting adverse power. With the Christian's mobilest dower; Knows that man stands not in givry. But his glory users for all. In that faith fully he riseth Every time that he may fail.

Oh! that man would read this lesson, From the Autumn's touching truth, Learning that the erop he respect I from society synthem. That this life is but the seed time, Which in mercy God has given. That his sowings might prepare him, For the garner in the heaven.
