Illustrations. Many of them from flourishing Cape Breton. New Glasgow gets a larger share of attention and portraits of prominent civil officials from there and Sydney and other points in Nova Scotia make the issue more interesting. Messrs. Knowles & Skillings have covered a good deal of territory in the line of illustration and this enterprise is quite apparent in the pages of Cricket.

OLD-TIME CUSTOMS

Some of the Old Quaker Customs and Forms of Entertainment.

In the history of the old Quaker Coates family, of Pennsylvania, we are told of a sermon preached by a certain godly Friend Benjamin Lay, near the end of the last century, on the vice of luxury.

He spoke to a great crowd in the street in Philadelphia from the balcony of the court-house. On a table beside him was his wife's new service of French china, and he emphasized every sentence by banging a cup or a plate on the stones below, until nothing but a heap of glittering fragments remained. One does not like to think of his home-coming, unless Mr. Lay's temper was under better control than her husband's.

Boys addicted to lying or profanity were whipped, it not into virtue, into silence. The rawhide was found in every well-ordered household, ready for instant use. In Pennsylvania hardened offenders were often publicly treated to a discipline of fasting and prayer in the hope that the evil spirit would be driven from their mouths in visible form. Watson in his annals, tells of the torture for days of some these men by well meaning zealots, the town looking on.

In Virginia women guilty of evil speaking and slandering were compelled to appear in church during the service wrapped in white sheets, to make confession of their fault, and publicly to pray for pardon.

The methods of sinning and of correction differ in every age, but after all it is the same man and the same woman in Eden, in African jungles, in Quaker meeting houses, in Catholic chapels, in Protestant churches, or in American clubs today. The same sinners: evil is at work, and the same Helper is at hand.

The Welcome Soap Co.

The Welcome Soap factory, since their scorching and escape from being burned up, in the fire which consumed the Peters Tannery, has been making considerable improvements. The front of the building is nicely repainted as well as the interior, where much repairing and improvements have been effected. In this factory is made the Famous Welcome Soap for the Canadian markets. This soap is an American article, it is so popular and well known that the familiar clasp-hand Trade Mark and name has been a household word throughout the New England states for years.

The manager of this business reports a very busy season, and that their factory has been worked up to its full capacity for some months. Welcome soap is steadily growing in favor and the sales noticeably increasing, which not only is a sure indication of the superiority of Welcome Soap as a household necessity, but that the article is advertised to the consuming public and the sales pushed with energy and ability. This company are liberal and constant advertisers, and employ three pushing and popular travelling salesmen to cover the Maritime provinces, and see that Famous Welcome Soap is on sale and well represented in every locality.

Two Answers.

Not long ago a Boston clergyman received an evening call from an elderly man and woman who expressed a wish to be joined in the bonds of matrimony then and there.

"Have you ever been married before?" asked the clergyman of the man, an honest-eyed weather-beaten person of seafaring aspect.

"Never, and never wanted to be before," was the prompt reply.

"And have you ever been married before?" the question came to the woman.

"No, sir," she replied with equal promptness; and with a touch of humor that appealed to the clergyman at once, she added, "I never had a chance!"

The marriage ceremony was speedily performed, and the clergyman refused to take any fee, telling the bride with a wink in his eye that it had been a privilege to officiate, which he would have been very sorry to miss.

The plot of the week has been taken up with Christmas shopping and the other preparations anticipated by the season and this has given place to everything else. The shops have been crowded, every afternoon and the streets have a gala air even on the quietest Christmas-time. King street is of it these afternoons, brilliant of life and color. There is a stir as a movement of hundreds of people intent on hundreds of varying aims and interests. The crowd is up in the early wintry twilight, make a gorgeous background for the street pageant and the sky takes on frost tints and a gamut of colors that even the rich violets and pinks in the streets and millinery windows cannot outvie. This is however diverging from strictly society matters, though it is the thing of importance just now.

Mr. Hyman who was in town this week gave a charming dinner at the Ritz at which the following were among the guests: Dr. White, Mrs. White, Mrs. and Mrs. C. Ooster, Miss Burpee, Miss Dever, Col. Geo. Jones and Mrs. Jones, Mr. Redmond, Mr. Sherwood Skinner and Mrs. Skinner.

There was no meeting of the married folks whist club on Monday evening, most of the lady members being too busy to think of the diversion. The whist club met at the residence of Mrs. Sherwood Skinner last Saturday evening, spent the time very pleasant and accomplished much in the way of work.

Invitations are out for two large teas, one to be given by Mrs. George F. Smith next Friday Dec. 29th, and the other by Mrs. Jack Thomson early in January.

Mrs. C. E. Clerk and Mrs. Frank V. Lee of St. Stephen spent a short time here last week.

Mrs. P. Bessie Terman of Halifax with her little son was in town this week the guest of Mrs. John Coker. Mrs. Terman was returning from Lowell where she had gone to attend the funeral of her uncle, the late Dr. F. C. Plunkett.

A lady sends the following to Progress with the request that it be published in the local society column; she says: "There is so little originality in our social amusements that the following description of a Christmas luncheon will be welcomed, I am sure, by those who desire a novel way of entertaining their friends during the Christmas season. There is no doubt that it will prove a most delightful and fun producing entertainment. Perhaps a description of one given the beginning of this week in Boston, by a young society lady to her girl friends sent to me by a friend today will best explain its nature."

"The decorations in the dining room, more especially of the table were as original as they were appropriate to the occasion. Stockings were here and there, everywhere, the cakes and decorations as much as possible repeating that form."

"Covers were laid for fifteen. In front of each a jolly old Santa Claus was weighted down, not by his usual pack, but by a red stocking containing delicious candies. The name card, consisting of a square white card, edged with gilt had an artistic sketch of a chimney hung with stockings; below, a suitable greeting and on the other side a name and date. Suspended from the chandelier by gay colored ribbons were favors shaped like stockings, made of pale green silk with lace about the top, and exquisitely painted sprays of holly adorned each one. Upon close inspection these proved to be souvenir sachet bags."

"Rising from a mass of green in the centre of the table was a pretty but small Christmas tree, lighted by small wax tapers and loaded with doll size red stockings. They contained a simple gift of some kind for every girl present either a thimble a letter opener, a pair of handled knife or stick pin. Between red candles burning under red shades low glass vases held two or three ornamental placed at diagonal corners 'wreaths' in smaller. Large sparkling glass bowls were piled with fruit and flowers and nests of green spun sugar baskets resembling stockings were filled with bonbons or salt d'nuts."

"After the delightful repast the girls gathered in the hostess's own special den and had a darning contest. They were given stockings with holes cut in the heel and toe and darning cotton was sold that they could have fifteen minutes to show their skill in darning. When the time was up, a vote was taken to see who merited the prize, the lucky young lady receiving a beautiful calendar. For the knitter who did the poorest work there was also a prize. A guessing game indulged in was extremely amusing. A grotesque looking stocking, stuffed full and imbedded in a wax laid upon the table and the guests were informed that they were to tell what was inside by merely feeling of it. Each one was given a sheet of paper and pencil and was allowed fifteen minutes to record guesses. The prize for the most correct list was the stocking and contents and as the stocking was full of comical toys of all kinds the opening of it caused a great deal of laughter and amusement."

An enjoyable tea was given by Mrs. T. L. Morris.

The Horses as Knight.

Oh! young Lochinvar has effected his steal! Miss Netherby's perched on his automobile; And, knowing the make to be one of the best, He's let on the stream and lit out for the West. 'Till I need some quick work on the part of your horse."

To stop this eloquent, said young Lochinvar.

They plunged through the mud and they ploughed through the mire, They rattled a bolt off and started a fire, Their course was so crooked it didn't appear That young Lochinvar 'd ever learned how to steer. Next up from beneath came a joggle and jive— "She's busted a bearing!" cried young Lochinvar.

Th'n something or other went wrong with the power— The pace was reduced to half mile an hour; And, hearing behind her an ominous hiss, Fair Ellen demanded the meaning of this. It meant that we'll just have to stop where we are. Till I find some more fuel, said young Lochinvar.

Be'nowhere on Canonicus Lea could be seen Any shop where a fellow could buy gasoline, Though young Lochinvar would have bartered a bank.

For three or four quarts to replenish his tank. So the venturesome pursuers sought up with his car And played polo with it and young Lochinvar.

The father's good broadsword, with violent rap, Overthrew the 'em into quarter inch scraps; And Ellen declared she was glad to get rid Of a person who seemed things as Lochinvar did. Then all of them got the poet youth the 'fit he is' And that was the faith of young Lochinvar.
