Marlborough Lodge Winners Of Silken Flag

Local Lodge, Sons of England Secured Fifty New Members Since First of the Year

Marlborough Lodge, Sons of England, had a grand rally at their last meeting, when the Supreme President, T. H. Carter, made an official visit, this being the first of the kind to any lodge since being elected to the position as head of the society. After being received by the lodge with official honors, he made an excellent address, in which he showed the great advance that the society has made numerically and financially during the war period. He also gave the members cause to be proud of the fact that the Sons of England as Canadian citizens were able to place in the ranks of the Canadian Expeditionary Force seven thousand of its members, and nearly one thousand made the supreme sacrifice. After showing that the society is a power for good in the great Dominion, he said he was delighted to know that the lodge, which is also his own, had added to its roll of membership fifty members since the first of the year, therefore winning the silken Union Jack which he had offered as a prize at the end of last year for such a feat. He then presented the flag to F. J. Panter, the president, who, on behalf of the lodge, thanked him most heartily. Great enthusiasm prevailed and hearty applause. The Supreme President then presented C. Ledford with a S. O. E. ring as an appreciation of long and faithful service. The recipient was much pleased and thanked for the thought and gift, and the lodge gave him much applause. The balance of the evening was spent in a social way. God Save the King.

The Hospital Commission And Its Plans

Citizen Points Out That Those in Charge of the Institution Are Handicapped.

The Hospital Commission was probably intended to divert attention from the Commission form of government, while it rains. The citizens, remarked a gentleman who has considerable knowledge of the work of the hospital. The Hospital Commissioners have had plans for the development of the hospital for years, though probably they have not worked them all out in detail. But the hospital authorities can do nothing without the consent of the City Council, or in the last analysis the city fathers. Under the old regime it was possible for the Hospital Commissioners to do something in a while, because then the City Council could sometimes make up its mind and stick to a decision for some time. But the hospital authorities have had to contend with since 1911, which covers the period to which most of the criticism of the Hospital Commission is directed. Penobscot, Sept. 13.—A wedding of much local interest took place Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hall, when their youngest daughter, Dorothy Drew, was united in marriage to Clarence ("Duck") Robinson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Robinson.

The bride was dressed in her traveling suit of taupe broadcloth, and carrying a bouquet of American Beauty roses, was given away by her father.

The room was decorated with flowers of all kinds, while in one corner a beautiful arch of autumn leaves was arranged, under which the ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. W. Currie, Mrs. Louis McCready, sister of the groom, played the wedding march.

After the nuptial knot had been tied and a wedding supper had been served to about sixty invited guests, the young couple left on the St. John train en route to Fredericton, amid showers of rice, confetti and the good wishes of a host of friends. On their return they will reside at Penobscot, where the groom is one of the leading dairymen of the place.

SOLDIERS PROVED EAGER STUDENTS

Khaki University Achieves Splendid Results With War-Weariness.

Montreal, Sept. 10.—That the Canadian Khaki University had been amply worth while, and had done much to aid soldiers overseas to prepare themselves for the coming home, was the statement made yesterday by Prof. J. A. Dale, of McGill University, who recently returned from voluntary work with the Canadian Khaki University in Belgium and France. Further, Prof. Dale said, the work of the Canadian Khaki University had had to a general acceptance by the British staff of the principle of so educating soldiers if other than military subjects that when they dropped their rifles they would be fitted for civil re-establishment, and able to become useful productive citizens. The Canadians had led the way in this, Prof. Dale said, and other nations were slow to follow their lead.

Was Well Worth While.

"Since my return to Canada," said Prof. Dale, "I have often been asked what have been the results of the Khaki University of Canada, as I have seen it was since its organization. The question has been raised whether it was worth while to attempt any educational service with men, not only in war time, but in the period of 'letting demobilization.' I went over with only the vaguest idea of what I was to do, but convinced myself that it was surely to be so in the weary interval between war and peace. This conviction became an indomitable when, on the invitation of Col. Perry, I began a circuit of the units of the 3rd and 4th Divisions of the Canadian Corps, when I realized the difficulty of granting an educational organization on one designed for war. These difficulties reduced many to absolute despair. The question now is, was it worth while?"

As to this Prof. Dale quoted a distinguished Canadian officer as saying that no matter what it cost (or how little) it was the best investment the Government could have made. The welcome given these travelling teachers by the officers and men, most of them huskily beyond belief, and tired of fruitless occupations after hostilities had ended, was whole-souled. The men returned to the training with avidity, and many of them received valuable assistance in the mental training that would break them away from the irresponsibilities of army life, and fit them for civil occupations.

Many Things Taught.

The work varied, said Prof. Dale. Generally it comprised elementary classes, with definite courses in agriculture, motor mechanics, and business subjects. In the majority of units from 60 to 75 per cent of the available men, enlisted in these classes, while the lectures were as well or better attended. Many of the instructors had assured Prof. Dale that they never had had such eager students as these soldiers, many of whom feared they would never be able to settle down again.

Prof. Dale said that his own experience had been gained visiting the troops through Belgium and France, with all sorts of meetings, from a dozen or two to a thousand or more, in all sorts of buildings from tents to war smashed sheds. He encountered men writing their first letters for themselves, as a result of their education back of the front. He encountered these scholars who had advanced geography with diagrams to eager classes; artists teaching sign boards, sketching, drawing, and French to other soldiers. "Real work was done," said Prof. Dale, "and whenever a teacher was given a good chance, he achieved wonderful results. The Khaki University work started in 'The University of Vimy Ridge.'"

Whatever the bulk results, Prof. Dale said, the Khaki University did incalculable good to large numbers of individuals, while the general results were so beneficial as to furnish the basis of a new era of peace and education. The period of training gives unequalled opportunity."

Already, he said, there were signs of a sincere effort to broaden the basis of army training, not only on drill, but to the end of a sound and practical education, and this was the view adopted by the British General Staff.

"There is no doubt," said Prof. Dale, "that the educational service of the Canadian Corps may count it as one of the greatest of its results, that its gallant and persistent efforts under very great difficulties served to drive home this wholesome conviction. They led the way and others have followed their lead. The idea is to train every soldier not only in military matters, but so that he may be truly himself and so a true citizen. When that is done we shall have done much to solve the problem of civil re-establishment, because such soldiers, if they survive, will be prepared to return to the service of peace."
