NOTES AND NEWS.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Grace Egerton is in Halifax.

The Haywards are at North Sydney.

The brakeman McKay, who was badly injured at Folly Lake on Tuesday last, is now doing well, and is likely to recover.

Six fat men happening to be together at the Fish Market, Halifax, they agreed to be weighed. Their weights were respectively 285, 278, 230, 233, 217, and 200 —total 1,452, or an average of 242 pounds ence.

The annual pic-nic of the Windsor and Annapolis Railway employees took place at Aylesford, Saturday. Twelve car loads of people arrived from the eastward, and three from the west. There were over a thousand people.

Temperance Hall, Halifax, was beautifully decorated on Saturday night with flowers, evergreens and bunting, in honor of the visit of Countess Dufferin, who had accepted Mr. Nannery's invitation to be present. The Countess, accompanied by a number of friends, arrived early and remained until the close of the entertainment. "Caste," and the "Quiet Family" were excellently played, and the Countess and the large and fashionable audience were highly pleased.

The steamer Lady Head arrived at Halifax on Saturday morning from Sable Island, bringing a dozen Sable Island ponies and a lot of wrecked material from the schr. Stella Maria. The walls of the new lighthouse at the west end of the Island were blown down on the 10th ult. The fog whistle was damaged by fire on the 2nd ult. Nelson Nangle, of the Eastern Passage, had his leg broken by an accident on the 8th ult.

UNITED STATES.

"A cackling old newspaper fool," is the epithet applied by one Sacramento editor to another in a recent argument.

The editor of a Nevada newspaper gives notice that he cannot be bribed with a five-cent cigar to write a five-dollar puff.

They are having very exciting times at Rye Beach, and the Rye has a good deal more to do with it than the Beach.

New York journalists are going to have a rifle match at Creedmoor in order to fit them more fully for the amenities of their profession.

The California mines are queer places. A Golden State reporter heard "the growl of a bear, the howl of wolf, the voice of prayer, the cry of a child, and the clash of bowie knives" from one gulch.

A Pennsylvania preacher, while holding service recently, gave thanks for the prosperous condition of their crops, "excepting, Oh Lord, the corn which is backward, and the oats, which are mighty thin in spots."

A pardon was found more effectual in curing a young man who was dying of consumption in an Illinois jail than twenty dozen of cod liver oil. In twenty-four hours his lungs were as sound as if there had never been anything the matter.

"Were you guarded in your conduct while in New York?" asked a father of his son, who had just returned from a visit to that city. "Yes, sir; part of the time by two policemen."

A man in Davenport (Iowa), has a treasure of a wife. She is so susceptible to mesmeric influences that he "can control her actions when out of sight and some distance away." This is an advantage few husbands can hope to enjoy. Such women are so scarce that their price would be above rubies if they were in the market at all.

Probably the first place in the heart of the true Bostonian is occupied by the Common and its aged elms; but Boston is fond of new notions and patent devices, and in an evil hour she pouliced the walks in the Common with asphalt pavement. The sad result is that one of the elms has pined away and died at sight of the innovation, and others are getting sick. There is a wail of anguish and a demand that the obnoxious stuff be instantly removed. The trees don't like it, and it must go.

It gives us joy to see evidences of filial affection, especially the noble devotion of a son to his mother. A fine instance is reported from Laporte, Ind. The mother was sick with the terrible disease, cerebro-spinal meningitis, and in order to have everything ready for her, he obtained some boards from the cellar and proceeded to make a coffin for her in the same room in which she was dying. She kindly remonstrated against his taking the trouble, but he insisted, and when she died the coffin was done.

Two jurors in Omaha, as soon as the jury retired, proposed, instead of bothering themselves about the case committed to them, to while away the time in playing poker, and had actually taken the pack of cards in hand for that purpose. The other jurors, however, protesting, the players desisted. We need not say that the jury did not agree; but the fact of the cards coming to the knowledge of Judge Lake, he had the pretty pair of jurors before him, and game them a moral lecture which they will long remember.

A Connecticut editor devotes a leading article to hymning the potato—the Irish potato. He glows, he gleams, he scintillates in expatiating upon the deliciousness of the tuber in general and of this year's crop in particular. "They are large and fair," he chants, and when you boil them they "burst their jackets and overflow in cataracts of vegetable snowflakes." Here's richness! Here's picturesqueness! A bounce into practicality announces that the present price in Connecticut of a bushel of these jacketed snow-flakes is only one insignificant dollar, which is very cheap for so much overflowing beauty. Then doth this poet, with a pensive kind of awe, state that not everybody knows how to cook these marvels. "There's an art," he says, "a genius like the poet's—born, not made," which produces fried potatoes as delicious as a fairy's dream; but he gives not the recipe. What peculiarly touches and charms one, however, in this song of praise is the statement that the potatoes are good and cost $1 per bushel.

They had a respectable celebration of the Fourth of July in Atlanta, Ga. The Herald and The Advertiser newspapers of that city advocated the observance of the day; but Alexander St. Clair Abrams of The Herald felt it to be his duty to enter a rather truculent protest against the course of his journal. Mr. St. Clair declined to celebrate the Fourth of July because "there was too much blood on it." Mr. St. Clair is ready to obey the laws of the United States, "so long as he is compelled by necessity to live under such a Government." But he wishes it to be distinctly understood that he feels no veneration for a flag "from the folds of which the blood of two hundred thousand Southern men is dripping, and which has for twelve years been an emblem of oppression, of humiliation and of degradation to the South."

GENERAL.

Sir George Jessel, the new Master of the Rolls, is the first Hebrew who has attained a position on the English bench.

Buz, who has read in a morning paper that Brown will row Biglin for $2,000 a side, wants to know how many sides Biglin has.

My Christians
Eat and drink, and scheme and plod.
And go to church on Sunday;
And many are afraid of God,
And more afraid of Mr. Grundy.

"Why are you crying so, my child?" inquired a French mamma of her grown-up daughter. "Because Mlle. B. gave me a slap in the face." "And did you return it?" "No, I gave her one first."

An exchange says: "When you see a bare-headed man follow a cow through the front gate, filling the air with garden implements and profanity, you may know that his cabbage plants have been set out."

An inquest was held in London, July 28, on the body of Mrs. Ellen Saunders, whose death was caused by her dress having caught fire from a match thrown down by a boy on the street pavement after lighting his pipe.

Several young fellows have broken off their engagements with fashionable fiances this summer. They say that kissing a lady with an Elizabethan ruff on is about as much fun as embracing a circular saw in full motion.

To see how eagerly a human being will catch at a straw, it is not necessary to witness a drowning. The phenomenon is now manifest chiefly within saloons, where one end of the straw is immersed in a tumbler.

Plato, the Sage, has had his birthday celebrated in Germany, but not, it seems to us, in the most appropriate manner. There were no debates on immortality, no metaphysical disquisitions; there was nothing intellectually lofty to mark the day. 'Twas a Kiel Professor of Philosophy who remembered the 2,202nd anniversary of gentle Plato's entrance to the world and made it the occasion of a ball.

"FOREST AND STREAM."—The new weekly paper of this name is very handsome, in presswork and arrangement of contents, and its illustrated title is a real piece of art. Mr. Charles Hallock is the editor and he is assisted by a strong corps of contributors, and they have produced a first number of rare excellence. Field and Aquatic Sports, Natural History, Fish Culture and the Protection of Game are some of the objects which this paper will foster. There is need for a new advocate to make the American people more in love with the outdoor life, and Forest and Stream promises to do the work admirably. The various departments are edited with knowledge and skill.

Whether it were better to have a living husband about the house, or $875 and his adored memory:—that is the question. An English woman was lately and involuntarily called upon to decide it. Her husband, a bankrupt Micawber, suddenly disappeared, and a body found shortly after in the Thames was identified as his. The agony of the bereaved dame was so prodigious that the creditors made her a present of the above mentioned sum and some furniture. She was immediately calmed and consoled, and was, indeed, prepared to enter the married state for the second time, when Micawber himself turned up, and the pleasant gift of property had to be restored to the creditors by order of the court. 'Twas abominably aggravating. When a man has been well and fondly mourned—and his wretched widow has become possessed of a comfortable little property—he should have sense enough not to come back, interfering, and bothering, and making things unpleasant. Enoch Arden, it must be gently and firmly said; wouldn't have done it.
