Under- Currents By The Duchess

"No. But you never said also that you were not going to walk here, so I hoped on. I think" with a second upbraiding glance "you might have come."

"I couldn't protest," Griselda said. "Even if for one moment I had intended to come which of course I hadn't at all it would have been out of my power. My cousin came down that day."

"Ah!" an eloquent silence. Then with all the air of one determined to get it out of her at all hazards "Man?"

"Yes."

"I see! Well, of course, I could hardly expect it. Your time was fully taken up, no doubt, with him. I don't suppose you so much as remembered my existence. Why should you?"

"Oh yes I remember it," says Griselda with unkind carelessness. She too is feeling angry.

"That was too good of you. And— and so you spent the whole day with this cousin?"

"Not quite the whole day. There were intervals."

"Naturally! You had dinner and lunch, I presume. You have noticed that even the strongest occasions for a passing recollection of its unusual goodness."

"You yourself said you were starving at eight last night."

"Well, so I was. So would any fellow who hadn't even seen a big cut since dawn. When did he come?"

"About seven, I believe."

"He lost no time. You weren't up there, then, I suppose? Or—perhaps you got up to receive him?" There is a sneer in his town now that raises her smouldering wrath to flame.

"My cousin arrived at my last evening," she says in a low distinct tone "I saw him at eight, just as we went into dinner."

"Only last night?" eagerly "And he is gone now? Where is he?"

"At Greycourt I suppose" frigidly.

"And you have come out here? You have left him?" cries he, coming impulsively closer to her. Indeed he makes a movement as if he would have secured her hand, but something in the sorrowful sternness of her gaze restrains him.

"Why shouldn't I leave him?" asks she, her large clear eyes questioning his.

"I don't know," feebly. "I'm only so awfully glad that you did leave him. That you preferred these woods to him. You're angry with me?" she says suddenly miserably. "I know it by your eyes. I shouldn't have said a great many things that I have said. I know that."

"I don't see how you should know anything about my eyes," says Griselda with a disdainful attempt at dignity. She looks at him steadily and long in his face that overcome her—but the smile.

"What were you doing?" asks she presently when he has given time for that unexpected smile to sink into him.

"Nothing worth the name. Ever since I met—that is—well, I don't care then. Ever since I met you I haven't caught a trout fit to be called one."

"That's a grievance," says Griselda, with a shy swift glance at him. "If it continues you will end by hating me."

"Shall I? An ending must have a beginning. How have I begun with you, do you think?"

"On a day like this to ask riddles?" parries she scornfully, though a pretty colour has crept into her cheeks.

"No, no. I never guessed one in my life; it is no use." Then "How did you get in here?"

"Round the corner. Do you see it? The stream winds past that rock over there, through so small a space that one scarcely sees it; I could hardly squeeze my body between the two rocks. Charming spot this, I always think. Are you tired? Shall we sit down for a while?"

"I haven't a moment," says Griselda; "I promised Vera to be back in no time."

"You promised her more than that I think," reproachfully "What was it you said about avoiding me when first we met? I suppose you told her of our meeting day before yesterday."

"I tell her everything," said Griselda, simply.

"That is quite right. I am glad of that," returns he earnestly "only I wish you sister could bring herself to give you different counsel. If she saw me again, do you think it would do any good?"

"Not a bit," says Griselda laughing. Uncle Gregory doesn't know. And to tell him—Oh! that is beyond either of us. With a charming frown, full of horror.

"Well, never mind. Time is a wonderful thing; it works so many changes, and perhaps after a while—"

He stops short, and then leaning towards her—they are sitting on a bank by this time—he looks anxiously into her eyes. "Do you know," he says with some hesitation—"I want you to tell me something. It is so awkward when I am thinking of you, not to know; yesterday I found it really hard. Will you tell me your Christian name?"

"They say people always look like their names. Don't you think?" with a pretty little coquettish glance at him from under her big hat "you could guess mine?"

"I know what I think it ought to be."

"Tell me!" says she with a pretty curiosity, edging closer to him.

"Pansy; Heartsease," softly. She seems rather struck with this, and gentle cloud gathers on her brow.

"Well, 'tisn't," she says with a regretful sigh. "It is—I'm almost ashamed to tell you, though of course it wasn't my fault—but it's Griselda! Isn't it a shame? I do think" pathetically "when people have so far the pull over you as to be able to give you a name for all time before you can argue the point—before you can even show your displeasure, not having a tooth wherewith to do battle—that they might have the decency to choose out the possible one. When one is strong, one should be merciful. Now it is Vera who should be Griselda."

15 TIMES THE MONEY

was spent on doctors' bills, without any benefit, as was spent in Zam-Buk, which effected a complete cure!" says Mrs. Fred Gervais of 126 Bligny St., Montreal.

"A rash broke out on my baby's skin, and she became very fretful and lost weight. I took her to a doctor, who gave me some lotion to apply, but it did not do baby any good. I then took her to another doctor, but with the same result."

"Then a friend, who saw the condition baby was in, brought me some Zam-Buk, which she so highly recommended that I commenced using it. In one week's time baby looked much better, and before a month had elapsed she was quite well again."

"Baby is now the picture of health, and I think it wonderful that $2 worth of Zam-Buk brought about this cure when $30 spent in doctors' treatments did no good whatever! I certainly advise other mothers not to experiment with useless remedies, but to save their little ones unnecessary suffering and themselves needless anxiety and expense by using Zam-Buk in the first place."

Zam-Buk is also best for eczema, ringworm, itching about the ears, abscesses, bad legs, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns and scalds. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 56c. box, 2 for $1.25.

Why Chilly Weather Brings Rheumatism

Says Skin pores are closed an uric acid remains in blood

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast every morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

HEART FLUTTERING EASILY CORRECTED

Good Advice to Folks Bothered With Palpitation, Weakness, Etc.

If your heart flutters, be careful. An attack is liable to come on at any time. Excitement, over-exertion or emotion may cause it.

If blood rushes to the head, if palpitation and short breath are noticeable, there's cause for alarm.

If you want a good honest remedy try Ferrozone. We recommend Ferrozone because we know it's just right for heart trouble. It cured A.F. Beattie who lives at Allen Hotel, Bay City, Mich. See if your symptoms resemble these:

Some Symptoms of Weak Heart Nervousness, Palpitation, Trembling, Dizziness, Sinking Feeling, Heart Pain, Short Breath, Weakness.

Mr. Beattie says: "I was weak and miserable. I was subject to heart palpitation and dizziness."

"As I grew worse I began to have trembling and sinking sensations. Ferrozone strengthened my heart, gave vigor to my nerves, soon made me well. It's a great builder."

By strengthening the muscles of the heart, giving proper circulation and causing a general rebuilding of the whole system, Ferrozone is bound to do grand work in heart trouble. Try it 50c per box or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarthzone Co., Kingston, Ont.
