our people who would gladly quit present surroundings, associations, and temptations, had they the chance.

- 18. In order to make good the drain on our agricultural population, an essential part of the scheme must be the formation, under some proper system, of large or small training-farms at suitable points throughout the three kingdoms. To these places might be drafted all lads from orphanages, street youths from our great cities, men who hang about the streets picking up a precarious livelihood, and the like, to learn farm-work—the natural occupation of a great majority of mankind.
- 19. Parliamentary powers would have to be asked to enable the Government of the day to borrow, when required, sums not exceeding 20,000,000 sterling in all, by creating a new Emigration Stock to bear interest at the rate of three per cent. During the first two years about 5,000,000 sterling would be wanted; the interest upon which sum, to be borne by the taxpayers, is only 150,000 l. sterling per annum. The funds raised in this manner to be employed in England and Canada for the general purposes indicated, under proper control and audit in the customary way; the expenses of official staff to come out of these funds, and a percentage to be charged upon the allotted land to defray those expenses. All moneys received by the Emigration Commission as reimbursement of loans, sales of mortgage bonds, of produce raised on "Government lands," or of such lands themselves, to be paid over per contra to the National Debt Commissioners in order to purchase and extinguish consols. I think it fair to expect that, before the power to raise 20,000,000 had been fully used, returns would flow back to us; that the 20,000,000 sterling, if called up, would be all reimbursed before expiry of 10 years; and that, far from any loss of capital resulting from these transactions, there might be immense profits.
- 20. To attain the ends I have described, a country like ours, which threw away, for the sake of a policy of the moment, 100,000,000 sterling in the Crimca, might sacrifice much. But I cannot see that any sacrifice whatever is needed. For, supposing 200,000 men, women, and children left our shores in the flist year, and that 10 l. yearly per head be put as the average cost of maintaining them here, then surely society is benefited to the extent of 2,000,000 l. sterling for that one year alone (to say nothing about the future) by their departure. The food they consume, if they remain, ceases to be imported.
- 21. If it should be objected a point will be reached when the exodus will cease to be a benefit to us, I answer it can be stayed at that point, for it would be the duty of the Emigration Commission to keep State advantage in view, such being the raison d'être of their office.
- 22. But the foundation of a new populous and wealthy society, on the other side of the Atlantic, must benefit this country in another way. They will purchase our manufactures from us, thus adding to our wealth, instead of consuming it, as they do while here. For, of course, every individual in Great Britain, be the population 20,000,000 or 30,000,000, has to be fed somehow. And owing to this necessity we are rapidly sinking into national and personal poverty because nothing is done or attempted, by legislators and statesmen, in order to preserve a reasonable proportion between the people and the land they live on. Had we no colonies it would be another matter. The truth of the controversy respecting imports and exports lies here. We import a greater excess year by year, and thus grow poorer instead of richer, simply because we have more mouths to feed each year. While this goes on vast territories belonging to the Empire remain deserts, and others are given away.
- 23. The existence of great fleets of steamers of vast size which could not have been had a few years ago, the political difficulties and pressing yearly increasing distress in England, the wish of the Dominion Government to settle the North West Territory, which was owned by an exclusive private corporation only 12 years ago, the certainty of a German and probability of a Chinese immigration thither
