

D-hydration.

In a recent edition of a popular magazine there appeared a cartoon featuring a man with a model battleship in his hand, standing in the Patents Office. There he is saying to the one in charge: "Just put it in water and it will swell up to the normal size. It's a dehydrated battleship."

A recent survey made by the Swallow Poll shows that there has been a great decline in the consumption of potatoes since the advent of the dehydrated brand. "Spurn the Spuds" has become the inaudible slogan of many. Mr Murphy greatly concerned about this situation contacted his cousin Mr. New Potato in the State of Virginia, who immediately took steps to rectify the situation.

Why all this? Well it reminds of the old saying "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." We never really appreciated potatoes until we had to eat the water logged, deflavored type. But what has this to do with us? Simply this. Owing to the shortage of farm help many people have been heard to say: "Oh the poor farmers". Poor farmers, nothing. It will be poor us next season if we don't do all in our power to get the present crops in. You can do your part by helping in the various Station Victory gardens. You can augment these efforts by working on neighboring farms during the evenings, or while you have a 48 or 56.

Remember there is a great need for help on the food production front. Lets make an all out effort to do our part.
