Radiol

RADIOL TREATMENT
prolongs the life of a horse's legs. Completely removes by radiation all soft swellings that disfigure and lame a horse, as Sprained Tendons, Windgalls, Bag Spavins, Capped Elbows, Big Legs, Enlarged Glands, etc.
No Blister: No Laying Up; No Hair Removed.

RADIOL TREATMENT fines down a horse's legs, and is a certain cure for puffy joints and sprains. Prevents Filled Legs.
An intelligent use of the "RADIOL LEG WASH" counteracts that daily wear and tear of the legs unavailing with the horse in constant work, whether training, racing or on the road.

One flask of "Radiol" will make a gallon of valuable leg wash.

Carlisle, Uddington, Eng., July 28, 1906.
Sirs.—Kindly forward on receipt of P. O. an enclosed another bottle of "RADIOL." I have been using it with great success on a Hackney mare with a very bad windgall that the vet. had given up. Yours truly, Thos. Prestlie.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED BOOKLET AND USES OF
"RADIOL." Ask your chemist for "RADIOL."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
Miscellaneous.LIQUID IN STOVEPIPE.

We have a stone house with brick chimneys and chimney tile in chimneys, and a wood furnace. Sometimes the furnace pipes leak a black liquid when the dampers are closed, and at other times it is all right. We burn dry soft elm. Generally, the fire is on several hours before they start to leak. The pipes were cleaned recently. The furnace has been in seven years and never leaked so badly as this fall. What is the cause of pipes leaking like that, and how can it be avoided?

SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—Even in perfectly dry wood there is given off in burning, as a product of combustion, a certain amount of water vapor, which, on coming in contact with a cold surface, condenses into liquid form. Where a long pipe leads through a cold room, sufficient quantities are so condensed as to cause an excess of water in the pipe. This, when mixed with the soot always found in the pipe, and also with rust that is formed, forms the offensive black liquid mentioned. If the stretch of pipe can be shortened, the trouble may be avoided. Otherwise the warming of the room is the remedy. If a steady fire is kept up the heat from the pipes will warm the room, and, in time, the dripping will cease. Another remedy is found in arranging a length of pipe so that the main draft will not go through the stove. By cutting a circular opening in a pipe length and fitting a short length over it so that the opening may be closed when desired, a current of air from the room can be admitted. This will avoid sweating of the pipes or dripping.

APPLYING MANURE.

Will you be good enough to let me know when you would advise putting manure on the ground in order to obtain best results when one is in a position to take it out at any time during this year?

C. E.

Ans.—As a rule, the greatest degree of benefit will be obtained from the manure by hauling promptly to the field and spreading, though there are, of course, exceptional cases, where another policy is preferable. In a well-arranged system of rotation, under Southern and Western Ontario conditions, a considerable area of land is devoted each year to corn, roots and soiling crops. These should receive the bulk of the manure, and the best time to apply it is during the winter, as made. For root crops it is perhaps best applied as a winter top dressing on fall-plowed land. For corn, on other than heavy clay land, a first-rate plan is to top dress soil during the winter and then plow this in spring. When time does not admit of spring plowing, a method similar to that advised for roots may be adopted. Where the land is hilly and the snowfall heavy, the manure may be drawn out in winter and piled neatly at convenient points in the field to be distributed with a manure spreader in spring. Where a quantity of manure is made during summer this can be hauled out as made and spread over the permanent pasture, or may be applied sparingly to land intended for fall wheat. It is not, however, making the most out of barnyard manure to apply it in large quantities directly for fall wheat. Better apply it to a preceding crop of peas or corn. A sound principle in cropping is manure for the vegetative crops such as corn and roots, with fine tilth for the cereals.
