The Price of Potatoes

When the Minister of Agriculture for Canada made investigations which showed that we had a surplus of two million bushels in Canada, a newspaper friendly to the Government said that the high prices were due to "apathy at Ottawa." What would this newspaper critic have the Government do? He does not suggest any action. He merely complains, and places the blame upon apathy at Ottawa.

Other critics have called for an embargo on potatoes shipped to the United States. The answer to that is that the embargo is a thing that two can play with. We might place an embargo on potatoes going to the United States in the same way that the United States may place an embargo on coal coming into Canada. One might very easily be the result of the other in which event the central Provinces of Canada would have double cause to complain because the potato surplus and the coal deposits are at the eastern and western ends of Canada.

A more reasonable critic would place the difficulty in lack of transportation facilities which would carry the products of the east and west more freely to the centre. But that cannot be due to apathy at Ottawa because the same difficulty exists everywhere, particularly in the United States.

The writer of an article in the issue of March 10th of the Saturday Evening Post on "Cabbages as a Luxury," says:

"Goods shipped from the west months ago are standing on sidewalks at way stations while trainloads of munitions are whizzing past, day after day."

On March 9th the New York Herald commences an editorial on the food situation with this sentence:

"There never has been a famine of foodstuffs in this country but always there has been a lack of adequate distributing agencies that frequently has resulted in what approached famine prices."

That is in the United States outside the area of "apathy at Ottawa."

But a government can do anything in war time and why not then fix a maximum price on potatoes? That is the next, and only other suggestion the critic could make. But why should the Government do this? It has been done in the case of paper, a commodity controlled by a few which the many need. Nothing else can take its place. But every man can grow potatoes, and the Government is calling upon the people to do so. High prices furnish a better argument and incentive than all the appeals the Government can make. In the meantime no one is going to starve or be put out of business because the price is high. We cannot recall that any one seriously suggested a fixed rate of a dollar a bushel when farmers were losing money by selling potatoes at forty cents. In the meantime the inquiring and unthinking and, therefore, uninformed criticism of a friendly newspaper is gleefully going the rounds of Liberal papers glad to circulate any sort of criticism against the Government no matter how unthinking and uninformed, and gladder still because it comes from a Conservative newspaper.

The fertilizing value of the total excrement from horses is about $20.00 per animal per year, and from cattle about $25, according to the chemical department of the Nebraska Agricultural Station. Do not lose much of this value by being careless about the manure pile.
