Leading and Reliable Clothiers

AT THE THEATRE. LOCAL BRIEFS

Manager Cairns, of the Grand has, already received sufficient assurance of crowds from Wallaceburg, Dresden and Glenora, to enable him to definitely announce that special trains will leave for these points twenty minutes after the curtain drops on the last act of "The Royal Box." The last act of "The Royal Box" may be cancelled to-morrow morning because of counter attractions at that place. A single fare rate from each of these towns has also been secured. To further accommodate the outside patrons of the house whose come in on the evening trains, the curtain will not be rung up till 8 o'clock, thus allowing everyone to see the opening of the play. These concessions should be appreciated by the outside theatre-goers and should bring large contingents from each place.

THE ROYAL BOX.

The Toronto News of Tuesday last has the following to say regarding Andrew Robson's production of "The Royal Box," which will be at the Grand here on Friday evening next: Another young Canadian actor, who is nearing the top rounds of the theatrical ladder of fame, played before a Toronto audience at the Grand last night, Mr. Andrew Robson who takes the leading role in "The Royal Box," is one of the steadily increasing company of young Canadians who have won or are winning for themselves name and fame on the stage. The mantle of Charles Coghlan, who first made the company famous, has fallen on Mr. Robson's shoulders, and he wears it becomingly. His portrayal of the actor Clarence was marked by much dignity and an intelligent conception of the role. The dressing room scene and the scene in the theatre were especially effective, and the repeated curtain calls from the audience. Mr. Robson showed his good sense last night in firmly declining to comply with the annoying, senseless and long continued cries from the "gods" for a speech. If his example were generally followed by other actors it would have a salutary effect on some patrons of the "gods," who expect a "speech" from the star actor every night. The play itself is too well known to Toronto audiences to need any description. Mr. Robson's support was fairly good, but not brilliant. Miss Mabel Wright was a naive Celia Price, and shared with Mr. Robson the honors of the evening. The stage settings and costumes left nothing to be desired.

PERFECTION OF NEGRO ENTERTAINMENTS.

An entire comedy presented on the legitimate stage by a negro cast, has been looked for and expected by advance thinkers on theatrical entertainment, but never attempted until Messrs. Cole & Johnson presented the highly successful musical comedy "A Trip to Coontown," both these comedians starring in the piece three seasons. The New York Sun in review of the piece, said: It was the most artistic farce comedy seen in New York for years. Such flattering comment on this entirely new departure was more than was expected even by its writers. For its fourth tour of the country a number of new features and novelties will be introduced in the comedy, and everything possible done to advance its excellence. The same high class artists that were with the company last season have been re-engaged, with additions from the pick of the colored profession. Messrs. Cole & Johnson have, by their individual work with the company, given an entertainment that is refined, fascinating and amusing. Mr. Cole's tramp being incomparable, and as a comedian he is without an equal in his line. Mr. Acton Davies, a distinguished critic of New York City, said of him: "He is the equal of Dan Daly or Walter Jones, having more distinction than either and funnier than Ward and Vokes rolled together." Mr. Johnson has had a long experience on the stage, being the leading comedian in the most famous productions given by colored talent. The New York Sun said of his work in "A Trip to Coontown," "He is an artist in his fingers' tips." The patronage of this entertainment has been most distinguished. While in Ottawa, Canada, the performances were attended by their excellencies, Lord and Lady Aberdeen and family, also many ladies and gentlemen of titled nobility. While in New York society was pleased to attend this novel and artistic production, making the evening audiences during the engagement as notable as an evening of grand opera or a classic production at Daly's. "A Trip to Coontown" is the best diversion ever given the public by the negroes of the stage, and stands as the perfection of negro entertainments. These old Chatham favorites will amuse the patrons of the Grand on Saturday evening next.

Mrs. David Ellis charged Mrs. Scott with using insulting language. Both parties live in North Chatham, and the case promised some lively details but fortunately it never came to trial. Ward Stanworth acted as mediator and both parties decided to withdraw the case and share the costs, so the little difference between the women was not aired at the police court.
