HASZARD'S GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1851.

(The following was prepared for our last number, but unavoidably mitted on account of the press of matter convequent on the late gale.)

THE last Alvertizer says. "We will call Haszard's Gazette to witness against itself, that it has thrown the Gazette to witness against itself, that it has thrown the first stone, in the line of writing, which may be called personal." We appeal to the Public, and call it to witness that we have been guilty of no personality whatever. It is fortunate for us that he has quoted the obnoxious paragraph, "The whole of the Administra-tion" — we state — "from George Coles to Edward Wholen are totally and entirely ignorant of the manobnoxious paragraph, "The whole of the Administra-tion" — we state — "from George Coles to Edward Whelan are totally and entirely ignorant of the man-ner in which the duties, their high and responsible position has entailed upon them, should be performed." Now we should really like to know, what is there of personality in this? If there was ever a sweeping renerate accention is in the series constituent is more general assertion, it is the one in question; it is, more-over, the issue that the public are to try, and their verdict may be expected at the next General Election. In the menntime, as a public opposition journal, we will go on, as we have successfully begun, in the matter of the Firewardens, to prove the truth of our assertions. And we shall continue, if we think fit, to try all the actions of the Administration by the same unerring rule, "their accordance with the law of the land and the principles of the Constitution." The Administra-tion know, or it must be taught, that from the moment they came upon the public stage in their various characters, from that of President of the Council to that of Queen's Printer, they exposed themselves to verdict may be expected at the next General Election. that of Queen's Printer, they exposed themselves to the same fate, and rendered themselves liable to the same treatment that actors on the stage of the drama same treatment that actors on the stage of the drama are exposed and liable to, and it is our unquestioned right, as part of the public, whether our seat be in box, pit, or gallery, to applaud or to hiss, to praise or to censure, just as it suits our inclination or conviction; censure, just as it suits our inclination or conviction, nor have they any right to complain so long as we keep our proper place before the scene, and judge and criti-cize their acting only. It is the attempting clandes-tinely to get behind the scenes, to pry out the private back of the behind the scenes, to pry out the private faults and foibles, the little weakness s in the character of the man, apart from that of the actor, that is mean, of the man, apart from that of the actor, that is mean, despicable, and cowardly. Open criticism, whether delivered in the theatre and manifested by the clapping of hands, and the thumping of walking-sticks, or signi-fied by the contemptuous hiss, or the more expressive "Off! Off!" or detailed in the columns of the news-paper or review, is the best safeguard of public morals, and the best corrective of public taste, and as such has ever been sedulously protected. And to this open, bold, manly criticism we shall always adhere, nor shall any thing provoke us to violate the sanctity of domestic any thing provoke us to violate the sanctity of domestic life, or trespass on the immunities of personal reputation. We have not nor will we write a line, that shall have the least tendency to impugn the moral character of any member of the cabinet. Many a man of great worth and excellent talents in private life, has tried the bound of both they must store and how compelled boards of both these great stages, and been compelled to retire for want of ability to maintain his footing, and to retire for want of ability to maintain his footing, and in such cases, though we laugh at and perhaps despise the actor, our admiration and friendship for the man may be as fresh and uninpaired as ever. As members of society, we have not only no fault to find with the present ministry, but in some of them, with whom we are on terms of friendship and acquaintance, we see much to praise and to respect. And while we admit this, we still adhere to our first position, that they have formed a mistaken idea of their own abilities, as states-men, that they are totally unfitted for the parts they have undertaken, and that, as soon as the season is over, a new manager, with a new company, will have over, a new manager, with a new company, will have to take the stage, and it will be then their turn to sit as

And we are told, moreover, "That there is more joy over one sinner that repeateth, than over ainety and nine just men who need no repeatance." It was our intention to have made some allusion to the attack on the Magistrates and Agricultural Society, will be difficult, we fear, to keep down riot and intem-perance, where large bodies of men are collected to setter, until we are able to establish a regular police, armed with a due authority. In the mean time, how ever, let our Magistrates cope with what is in their of intoxication, where they may be able to carry the faw into effect, and they will have done nuch towards putting down this crying evil. We may say, however, are passand, that it is certainly humorous to find the ad-putting down this crying evil. We may say, however, are passand, that it is certainly humorous to find the ad-putting down this crying evil. We may say, however, are passand, that it is certainly humorous to find the ad-proverte of Horse racing opposing Cattle Shows, on the ground of immorality? There are some, who as Hudi-tras says, as says,

"Compound for sins they are inclined to, By damning those they have no mind to."

Our attention was, a few days ago, called to a Proclamation crying down the Copper Tokens that we noticed some time since, as having been put into circu-lation. Were it not for the circumstance of the docu-ment appearing in the Royal Gazette we should have supposed it to be a hoax, and a clever one too, for the purpose of directing the attention of the Executive to the want of a proper and appropriate copper coinage. Though a bona fide Proclamation, given under the hand of the Licutenant Governor, and scaled with the Great Seal of the Island, it has excited as much fun and laughter, as if it were really and truly the hoax it apof the Lieutenant Governor, and scaled with the Great Seal of the Island, it has excited as much fun and laughter, as if it were really and truly the hoax it ap-pears to be. Honor where honor is due ! Praise when deserved ! and the honor and praise of having discovered, that the Island was possessed of a raluable copper coinage, capable of being depreciated, is certainly due to the present Administration. We were totally unaware of the fact, if such it be and are compelled to confess, that our researches into the reality of this flat-tering account of the cupro-monetary market has been attended with marked disappointment. Out of about one hundred of the only copper coinage formerly in cir-culation, and we presume it must be that alluded to in the Proclamation, we found ten Penny pieces, not one of which passes current in either Nova Scotia or New Brunswick; of Halfpenny pieces, a numerous, though not perhaps a very valuable assortment, consisting of Halifax merchant tokens, most of them issued, to our knowledge, upwards of thirty years since, eleven dif-ferent kinds; two of "Canada," of the issues of 1830 and 1841, much smaller and lighter than those ful-minated against, three Canada merchant tokens, three light fourted do. and 1811, much smaller and light?r than those ful-minated against, three Canada merchant tokens, three United States do., one Newfoundland do., counterfeit English, Irish, and Nova Scotian in great abundance, besides shankless buttons, plain brummagems and non-descripts of all descriptions. In the whole, there were about six or seven Province of Nova Scotia genuine, one Now Runsmit do and a soliany American cent one New Brunswick do., and a solitary American cent. Not one British cointin the whole lot! And these are the Raps, that, instead of being nailed to the counter, are taken under the immediate protection of the Exe-cutive Council of Prince Edward Island. Degraded and disgraced, discarded and dismissed from all civilized society, they have found their way to the hospitable shores of Prince Edward, and may now boast of being what they never were before, the legitimated coin of one of Her Majesty's British Colonies. Vivat Regina!
