

An Act of Mankind

They may talk of their horses and their... The horse that was on their side...

MOONDYNE

BOOK FIRST: The Gold Mine of the Vase

BY JOHN DOYLE O'REILLY.

CHAPTER VII.—(CONTINUED).

They went ahead rapidly, thanks to Moondyne's amazing strength; and by daylight were a long distance from the point at which they started.

It was late in the afternoon when they halted for the day's first rest. Moondyne climbed a mahogany tree...

Behind the aged king, in the full light of the fire, stood two young girls, dark and skin clad like their elder...

The old chief welcomed Moondyne with few words, but with many signs of pleasure and deep respect...

The punishment of falsehood is to suspect all truth. The mean of soul cannot conceive nobility. The vicious cannot believe in virtue.

Without a word the young and powerful bushman took his spear and returned to the mouth of the gloomy pass.

THE KING OF THE VASE.

Behind the bright fire of mahogany wood, and slowly advancing to meet the strangers, was a venerable man...

Graver than the sedateness of civilization was the dignified bearing of this powerful and famous barbarian. His erect stature was touched by his great age...

That Pie

One outside, and two inside, was the dread burden of the sergeant's thought. "Two days' ride—but can he see the way?"

The sergeant retired to a tent of skins and, lighting a fire at the opening, lay down to rest. Sleep came slowly to every member of the party.

The old chief pondered on the presence of the stranger, who now held the primal secret of his native race.
