Ancient Homes of Scot land.

" Under the title of "Applient Catholic Homes of Scotland," Messrs. Burns and Oates are about to pub- the first account of the capture of lish a work of singular interest, re- Lord Nithsdale is followed by the ligious, artistic, and historical. The fine poem in which an aged bard author. Dom O do Blundell, O. S. B., laments the doom of his chieftain : of Fort Augustus, informs us in his brief preface that his materials were mostly gathered from printed sources which are difficult of access. And he is content with the modest claim that these records are now presented in a handier form. But in this we fancy that he has someown part in the work. For apart notices contain much that was not merely copied from the aforesaid printed sources there is surely something original in the design of the whole book in which this series of pleasing pictures of these ancient O that I lay but with him in sorrow homes is made to illustrate the Catholic history of Scotland.

The ancient Catholic homes treatad in this attractive volume are Carlaverock, Letterfourie, Terregles, Glenfinnan, Beaufort, Traquair, stirring song with which Allan Cun-Kirkconnell, and Fetternear. And in every instance the article has had the advantage of revision by some one who is entitled to speak with special authority on the subject. It will be enough to mention that the article on Carlaverock was revised by Lord Herries, and that on Beau. fort by Lady Lovat. It may be added that the Hon. Mrs. Maxwell Scott of Abbotsford bas written an introduction to the volume-appropriately enough; for it was only fit that this history of Scottish homes should be associated with the home of Scottish history.

As Mrs. Maxwell Scott says very truly in her introduction: "To us who belong to the 'Lean Northern Land' everything connected with is of supreme interest, and from others the story of the sufferinge of the Catholies in Scotland for their faith, and the happy signs of the second spring' will, we feel sure, gain sympathy and interest. This will be increased when we remember that the author speaks to us from the first Benedictine monastery founded in Scotland since the Reformation-in itself one of the most consoling evidences of the return of the faith-and that he has bimself visited each of the places described in his book.

"Father Blundell." it is added " has also a family connection with work that seems likely to remove three of the homes-Carlaverock, this misapprehension. And, as our Terregles, and Traquair-being one readers may remember, we have of the descendants 'pumerous be- already had occasion to call attenyond compare' of Lady Winifred tion to the labors of Mr Erskine and Maxwell, granddanghter of the the other writers of the "Guth na heroic Lady Nithsdale." As is only Bliadbna" who have insisted on the natural, the articles on Carlaverock native Catholicism of the Highland and Terregles which are derived in and the Western isles, and expatiatpart from "The Book of Carla- ed on the Catholic glories of Highverock"-are among the most inter- land history. This new book of esting portions of the volume. And Father Blundell's furnishes further here, as might be expected, the evidence of this truth, notably in lovely and heroic figure of Lady the chapters on Beaufort, and Glen-Nithsdale fills a conspicuous place. finnan, which tell the story of The story of her rescue of her husband from the Tower on the eve of who belong to the Catholic Gaidhis execution is told in every text- healtachd. At the same time, the book of English history. But the graphic account of Carlaverock and full details of the escape are not often given with accuracy. Some suffice to show that the native Cathseem to suppose that the Countess simply took the place of her husband while he escaped in her dress, Others, more careful of accuracy, are content to say that she took him out in disguise as one of her waiting women. But though in some res pects this version of the story is more correct, it is only half the truth, and hardly does justice to the courage and presence of mind displayed by Lady Nithsdale. In Father Blundeli's pages, on the contrary, we are given a very full and vivid account of the whole story partly taken from Lady Nithadale's letter to her sister. The Countess, it is clear, did indeed take her hashusband out as a servant, but after sending him away on an imaginary message she went back and remain.

Aching Joints

that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism, but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss Frances Sherm, Prescott, Ont.

"I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it saved my life." M. J. Modonald, Trenton, Ont. Hood's Sarsaparilla emoves the cause of rheumatism— utward application can. Take it.

slone in his cell till he had time to reach a place of safty. Meanwhile she threw the warders off the scent by a device which surely showed astonishing courage and presence of mind at this critical moment. "On reaching the Earl's chamber she effected to speak to him, and answerected to speak to him, and answered as if he had spoken to her, imitated his voice and walked up and down the room, as if they had been talking together, till she though he had had time enough to be out of reach. Then opening the door to depart, she went half out, and holding it in her hand, that those outside might hear, she took colemn and affectionate leave of her husband for that night." The truth in this instance is surely stranger than any fiction.

The interest of this story is further enhanced by the judicious introduction of some gems from the rich stores of Jacobite poetry. Thus Green Nithedale, make moan for thy and in pine,

And the steel that harms his gentle neck wad do so much for mine! This pathetic lament of the lova clansman has a counterpart in the ningham celebrates the Earl's deliverance. In this dramatic lyric one tells the tidings as the best of news-"The best that God can gie" -better even than the news that "the Duke" had hanged himself!

The Duke's hale and fier carle.-The blacker be his fa'l But our gude Lord of Nithsdale, He's won frae amang them a'.

There is, we may add, a special cause for satisfaction at the appearance of this volume which, with its fine illustrations and historical portraits, is likely to attract a goodly number of readers, For we fancy that many in this country are apt to pay too little attention to the bright story of Scottish Catholicism. This s due, no doubt, to the conspicuous and pronounced Protestantism of a great part of Scotland and of certain phases in Scottish history. And for many who do not stay to make careful descrimination, the Protestantism of Scotland is a broad national characteristic as evident as the Catholicism of Ireland. One might almost say more evident; for the Protestant minority in Ireland makes too much noise to let the most careless observer forget its ex-

The acts of every Pope are there recorded and ar. ranged in the order of time : and so vast are these records that the series now reaches the enormous number of 2150 huge volumes. It used to be alleged that the Roman authorities guarded these records with a jealous care because they contained things that could not bear the light. But the late Pope Leo XIII., said truth fears no criticism, and so, with characteristic fearlessness, he threw those the liquefaction was regarded, not ancient archives open to the world in only by the people at large, but by 1801, and invited scholars of all the clergy and educated laity. nations to come and search for knowledge. 27th day of September, 1432. Pope Eugene grants to the Archbishop of Tuam an indulgence of two years and two quarantines on the usual conditions, for those penitents who visit and give alms towards the repair of the fabric of the Chapel of St Patrick on the mountain which is called Orough Patrick; this indulgence to be gained on the Sunday preceding the Feast of St. Peter's Chains : because on that day a great multitude resorts thither to venerate St Patrick in the said Chapel.

Mr Gratton-Flood has been assisting in the Public Record Office, London, and when he came upon the above he sent a copy to his Grace of Tuam. The Archbishop, who has revived the ancient pilgrimage to Oroagh Patrick and has erected a chapel on its lone summit, was much gratified to have such authentic evidence that the pilgrimage was known and approved in Rome five hundred years
