Houses Looking Like People.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How houses do look like people! Not necessarily like the people who live in them, sometimes that, but other times like the people who have lived in them, and yet again like them who ought to live in them. Not far from our neighbourhood is a large, comfortable, handsome house, built in the style of ten or fifteen years ago. It has large, comfortable rooms with few angles, pleasant bay windows, expensive rather florid wall papers and a general air of comfort, comeliness well being. I do not know who lives in it now, but it always makes me think of a large, handsome woman, good-natured, not over intelligent, but comfortable to live with.

the mother of a brood of commonplace good looking children and the contented wife of a good provider.

The kind of people we always hope to meet.

Houses with nooks and crannies and steps up and steps down and surprising turns and quaint little windows with unexpected outlooks are like the quaint unconventional people one always dreams of meeting, and a few times in a lifetime actually meets; people no better than other folks, but different, with queer quirks and unexpected outlooks and whimsicalities; people such as Charles Lamb must have been.

Then there are houses that look like newly married couples, little plaster bungalows or trim little wood houses stained some pretty self assertive color, houses with not a great deal of individuality but fresh and young and modern looking. I am always surprised when I find, as one occasionally does, an elderly couple living in a house like that. One suspects that there must be in them some youngness of spirit that makes them choose such an abode.

Conservative people and Conservative Colors.

Speaking of colors people choose to paint their houses reminds me of a fact I noticed the other day. In a corner of our neighbourhood are five houses in a row painted in various self-effacing shades of drab, while at each end of the row is a stained house, one red, one green. I stopped to think the other day and found that the five drab houses are owned by five elderly people of the conservative type, and the two with the distinctive colors by young people.

A Beautiful Jewel in a Perfect Setting. Stately old fashioned houses with the serene grace of fine plain lines and solid simplicity, the kind of houses of which it has well been said, "An old house harbors peace better than a new," make me think of gracious serene personalities. Of course they are not always occupied by the people to whom they belong by right of fitness, but when one does find the gracious dignified presence in the gracious dignified old house it is like seeing a beautiful jewel in a beautiful setting, a perfect rose in a crystal vase.

In my newspaper work I once had the honor to meet in her home the sister of one of the greatest educators in this country. She was one of those dignified and yet kindly presences which are best expressed by the word gracious. Her home in Cambridge was a stately colonial house of colonial days, furnished as it should be. The half hour I spent with her in that house left me an impression of peace and fitness that will last me as an ideal through a lifetime.

Kueplerle Brings Trial to Dramatic Conclusion

HANGS HIMSELF IN PRISON—LEFT MESSAGE WRITTEN ON SLATE.

London, May 20.—Anton Kueplerle, who claimed to be an American citizen and who has been on trial charged with giving military information to the enemies of Great Britain, committed suicide last night in Brixton prison. He is reported to have hanged himself.

The Trial.

The trial of Anton Kueplerle began Tuesday at the old Bailey police court before Lord Chief Justice Reading and Justices Avey and Lush. The proceedings were public and the court room was crowded. The charge against the prisoner was that he attempted to communicate to Germany information respecting British warships and military forces.

The prosecution was conducted by the Attorney General, Kueplerle pleaded not guilty. The prosecution contended that while he claimed to be a naturalized American citizen he was in reality a German. He was charged with writing a letter to an address in a neutral country in Europe giving valuable facts regarding British military dispositions. It was asserted that while the letter appeared on its face to be an innocent communication, it was found to be interlined in invisible ink with military information written in the German language.

Kueplerle arrived in Liverpool on February 14. He showed a passport signed by Secretary of State William J. Bryan, issued ten days prior to his sailing from New York. In writing the letter, which resulted in his arrest, he gave his home address as 1985 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn. He represented himself to be a woolen merchant. From Liverpool he went to Dublin and then to London, where he was arrested on February 16.

Court Advised.

When court opened this morning, for the resumption of the trial, the Attorney General announced the death of the prisoner to the judges.

"Since the rise of this court last night," the Attorney General said, "this man Kueplerle has committed suicide in Brixton Prison. He was in a special observation cell under practically continuous observation, but during one of the short intervals, he seized the opportunity of taking his own life."

Chief Warden Cook, who is in charge of the prison, testified that last night the night warden named Perry, came to him and said:

"I cannot say the prisoner." Warden Cook immediately arose and opening the cell door, he found the prisoner hanging by the neck, from a corner behind the door. He had used a silk scarf to commit suicide and he was hanging clear of the floor. Warden Cook cut the scarf and summoned the prison doctor. The man's body was still warm but he could not be revived.

The Statement.

Warden Cook produced the slate on which the prisoner had written his message. The communication follows:

"To whom it may concern: "My name is Kueplerle and I was born in Rastatt in Baden. I am a soldier with a rank I do not desire to mention. I can say I have had a fair trial in the United Kingdom, but I am unable longer to stand the strain and I am taking the law in my own hands. I have fought many battles and death is the only saviour for me. I would prefer death by shooting, but I do not wish to ascend the scaffold as (here the prisoner drew a Masonic sign) and I hope the Almighty Architect of this universe will lead me in the unknown land. I am not dying as a spy, but as a soldier. I stood my fate as a man, but I cannot be a liar and perjure myself. I ask you kindly that my uncle, Ambrose Droll, of Rastatt, be notified of my death. I desire that all my estate go to him. "What I have done was for my country. Press my thanks, and may the Lord bless you all. Yours, etc., Kueplerle."

On the other side of the slate the man had written: "I was born June 11, 1883."
