

Acquitted of Manslaughter.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT NOT GUILTY.

After about 15 minutes consideration by the special jury, a verdict of "not guilty" was returned last night in the case of Denis O'Brien who stood charged with manslaughter. The case, which has occupied the attention of Mr. Justice Johnson since Monday, concluded at 10.30 last night shortly after the jury brought in their verdict. In the session yesterday afternoon Mrs. Denis O'Brien was called as a witness for the defence, and examined by Mr. Halley, afterwards being cross examined by Mr. Barron for the Crown. Dr. Roberts was also called and gave evidence as to the appearance of the deceased. The last witness called was Mr. James Harris, Secretary of the Board of Works. He gave evidence of the accused, efforts to have his brother admitted to the Poor Asylum. At 5.30 the Court took recess until 7.30, and on resumption Mr. Halley addressed the jury on behalf of the accused. For over an hour he dealt with the various sides of the case, referring to the general history of the accused and of the great burden he had been laboring under, and showing that when Denis was unable to do anything further for his brother, the English family had come to his aid and had performed good work. In view of the facts surrounding the case, Mr. Halley asked the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

Mr. Barron, for the Crown in an address which lasted three quarters of an hour reviewed the aspect which appeared to be the outstanding cause of the accused's brother's death. After a summing up and an explanation of the law in similar cases by the presiding judge the jury retired to consider their verdict. At 10.30 they returned to Court and through their foreman Mr. George Cook, announced a verdict of "not guilty." On motion of Mr. Halley the charge against the prisoner was dismissed.

Opening of Kingsway, London.

King Edward VII., accompanied by Queen Alexandra, on October 18, 1905 opened the Kingsway and Aldwych, which connects the northern and southern portions of London, and were the centre of the Strand Improvement Scheme, carried out by the London County Council. The King received Royal Addresses from the Mayors of Westminster and Holborn, and also from the Poplar Borough Council on behalf of the unemployed. In declaring the new streets open, the King said: "The improvement will do much to beautify the capital of my Empire and will be a perpetual memorial of the capacity and enterprise of your Council." By turning a golden key in a gilt glove, his Majesty caused the gates across Kingsway to roll back, and the opening of the thoroughfare was heralded by the playing of bands and the acclamations of a great concourse of people. In recognition of the event, his Majesty, on October 24, conferred the honour of Knighthood upon Mr. E. A. Cornwall, Chairman of the London County Council. This improvement did away with some famous old landmarks, including the Olympic theatre which had entrance in the Strand and also in Booksellers' Row, and in its most prosperous days was a resort of the fashionable people. Booksellers' Row itself was noted for its vast collection of books old and new. Here, every day, might be seen crowds of people turning over the books in the hope of finding the particular work the searcher was seeking. Wyck street was another turning running off Booksellers' Row, which had attained celebrity. In the Strand itself was a dairy which was said to have been the home of Nell Gwynne, the mistress of Charles II. All these old spots were wiped out by the Kingsway improvement, and although 16 years have passed a considerable portion of the site is still waste land.

Story of Social Problems at the Nickel.

BARBARA BEDFORD IN "THE FACE OF THE WORLD."

The principal attraction at the Nickel to-day is "The Face of the World." The following is the story in brief: Dr. Harold Mark meets Thora, who lives alone with her crippled grandfather. He succeeds in curing him, and marries Thora. They move to the city, where Harold gets a scholarship at a surgical school, but becomes interested in problems for world-wide betterment to the neglect of his wife and studies. A dashing and wealthy sculptor takes an interest in Thora, and she finally leaves Harold, who soon becomes disillusioned regarding his radical associates. Some time passes and finds Harold a successful physician in charge of a hospital. Thora, who has been the guest of the sculptor's aunt, realizes her mistake and declines to get a divorce. The sculptor starts to go to see Harold, but is injured in an automobile wreck. Harold operates and saves his life, sending word to Thora of the accident. He then returns to the old homestead, to which Thora also comes a little later and a reconciliation occurs.

Do You Use Oil Stoves?

Oil-burning equipments should be safeguarded in accordance with the regulations issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. It may be said, briefly, that systems employing the gravity feed to the burner introduce a greater hazard than those having the fuel supply delivered to the burner by pumps taking suction from tanks located underground.

The portable stove will become a prominent household appliance in the near future, and its use should be attended with great care. Numerous fires have been caused by filling the reservoir while the wick was lighted. All filling should be done by daylight and away from open fires or lights. The portability of the device is in itself a hazard; it is easily overturned. Serious injury by burning has resulted from weak spring catches securing the upper cylinder to the lower section. Therefore, the catch should be examined frequently and repaired if it is not functioning properly. The heater should not be carried or moved while lighted.

Explosions have been caused by defective wicks which do not entirely fill the wick tube section of the burner, thus leaving free communication between the flame and the space above the oil in the reservoir. Occasionally the wick and burner should be boiled in a strong solution of soda or lye and carefully dried before again being placed in service.—Insurance and Finance Chronicle.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO as JULIO in THE FOUR HORSEMEN of the APOCALYPSE

What Good Did the War Do After All?—You'll find the answer in the Rex Ingram production of Metro of France, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Star Theatre. He'd Won Her From Her Husband, Then War Came—The smart little Parisienne was left to choose between her passionate tango millionaire from the Argentine and her love for France. See "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Star Theatre.

Stepped in the Vice of the Latin Quarter, Julio watched others go to defend France. He was not a native of Paris. What could he have done to win his life? See "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Star Theatre beginning next week.

A Knife-Thrust From an Irresponsible Young Gaucho and nothing more would have been mentioned, for Julio was the spoiled prince of the Argentine plains. He took his millions and his irresponsibility to France. War broke out. See "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" at the Star Theatre beginning next week.

Omaha Judge a Modern Solomon.

Yesterday was "armistice day" in Judge George Holmes's division of municipal court, where two women entered "madder than wet hens," and departed with kisses warm upon their lips. They kissed each other, not the judge.

The judge believes that the ends of justice and peace on earth will have been served by omitting the names of these women, who occupy adjoining homes on Florence boulevard. One of the disputations twin brought an action against the other to keep the peace. The case was called for hearing and the judge quickly sensed a neighborhood row which grew from practically nothing.

One of the women charged that a neighbor told her that the other woman in this case said that her baby had a hare lip and the other woman retorted by alleging that another neighbor told her that the neighbor of this peace case said her baby had large hands and a bump on its head.

From those idle remarks by neighbors the disputants made faces at each other and otherwise displayed ill feeling until one brought an action in municipal court.

The judge took the women into his chambers and talked to them like an uncle.

"Do you say the Lord's Prayer?" asked the judge of one of the women, who replied that she did.

"Then repeat it here," added the judge. The woman complied.

"Do you mean it?" the judge asked. The woman hung her head.

"Now, I want you women to kiss each other right here, forget all that has happened, and resolve to live amicably hereafter," the judge continued.

The women kissed each other and went their way, whereupon the judge called the next case.—Omaha Bee.

ATTENTION!

Extract from the Montreal Daily Star:—

WELSH HARD COAL HOTTER THAN U.S. Less Ash and Much Better Heat, Says Ottawa.

GREAT DIFFERENCE Six Tons of Welsh Gives Same Heat as Seven Tons U.S. Coal.

OTTAWA, Sept. 16.—That the Welsh Anthracite delivered already in Ottawa has a much lower ash content and a much higher heating value than American anthracite received in this country for the past few years, that it is a true anthracite but breaks easier on handling and produces more fines than Pennsylvania anthracite coal, are the summarized results of an analysis of samples of Welsh coal submitted to John McLeish, director of the mines branch of the Dominion Government for testing. The report of the analysis is signed by R. E. Gilmore, chief engineering chemist, and B. F. Haanel, B.Sc., chief of the division of fuels and fuel testing.

An equal quantity of the lump and "fines", or dust, as some Ottawans who have received a delivery of the Welsh anthracite are disposed to call it, were submitted to the director of mines for testing. From the analysis given and from conversation with an official of the testing branch, it is claimed that the fines have excellent heating properties and should be extremely serviceable for the purpose of banking furnaces.

From further tests made it is seen that compared with Pennsylvania anthracite such as Ottawans have been using burning the Welsh anthracite has practically 10 per cent. less ash and about 10 per cent. more fixed carbon.

The British thermal unit is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of a pound of water one degree. Under this test it is found that the calorific value of the Welsh anthracite is given as 14,860 as compared with 12,490 for Pennsylvania anthracite "as received," or 15,200 for Welsh as compared with 13,000 for Pennsylvania when dried at 105 degrees Centigrade.

According to these tests therefore the Welsh anthracite has from 17 to 19 per cent. more heat producing properties than that from Pennsylvania, so that six tons of Welsh anthracite should produce as much heat as seven of the Pennsylvania coal.

In addition to having been given a private showing at sea on shipboard at the wish of King Albert of Belgium, Abel Gance's sensational production, "L'Accuse," which is being presented in the United States by the United Artists Corporation, and which has been obtained as the feature at the Majestic theatre Friday comes with the semi-official approval of the French government, having received signal praise from Andre Honore, French Minister of Public Instruction and Fine Arts. M. Honore declared that as a result of such films as "L'Accuse," the photoplay would take its rightful place as a legitimate art.

The great Sarah Bernhardt, who was afforded a special showing of the film, at her own request, warmly praised the artistry and dramatic qualities of the picture, and declared she did not believe the motion picture should be looked upon as a rival of the legitimate stage, but that, rather, the one should help the other.

A Definition.

(From the Maritime Merchant.)

When is a fishing schooner not a "banker"? According to Lunenburg practice, when she is merely a fishing schooner and not a freight carrier, as will. For half a century or more the Lunenburg bank schooner has been of a type fitted both to go to the banks on salt fish trips and to knock about the seven seas as well carrying the same fish when cured to distant foreign markets. It is an efficient type, from an economic standpoint, affording the utmost use of the vessel the year round—fishing in the summer, marketing in the winter.

Lunenburg sees no reason why a type of vessel should be abandoned that gives her an independence in the marketing of her fish which she could not have if her vessels were built merely for speed, and not for seaworthiness in any latitude in any season. Lunenburg wants a vessel that will both stand the strain of her arduous work and provide sufficient carrying capacity to make her profitable. When the schooner race was conceived it was the intention that only such vessels should be entered, and therefore the moment the schooner race becomes a yacht race it has no reason in the world for existence. So far the International Committee has been able to stand its ground on this principle, and in the interests of the purity of our new national sport we hope they will be able to maintain it.
